

The second stage would involve each country tabling a plan indicating in detail how it proposes to implement its commitment to reduce trade distortion measures by the specified percentage.

The final stage would be gradual implementation of the agreed upon reforms.