thereto and required by the British Columbia Government have been complied with. The value of these lands both for oil and coal, is known to be very great. They form a part of the two blocks of land that were claimed by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, and over which there was a strong contention between that Company and the Provincial Government for nearly two years. Some idea of the value of the lands may be gathered from the fact that the Provincial Government during the month of August is said to have received $60,000 in licence fees on applications in that District alone. The land belonging to this Company is exceptionally well situated, inasmuch as that the Canadian Pacific Railroad parallels the claims on the east side of the Elk River, and the Crow's Nest Southern (which is part of the Great Northern system), passes through the claims for 11 miles on the west side of the Elk River. A number of test tunnels were run in on the claims during the latter part of 1903. In one test tunnel
