Edward Harwood was given a sentence of two years in the penitentiary after pleading guilty to a charge of bigamy in the police court yesterday. Harwood, it is claimed, deserted his wife and family in England, who are being kept by the authorities, and came to Canada about six years ago. He first lived with a woman who is now dead and then was married to a woman named Haddock. The two illegitimate children died.

Talks With Screen-Struck Girls

By Beatriz Michelena
(Copyrighted 1916, by Beatriz Michelena)

Beatriz Michelena has been obtained through showing nothing but the eyes.

I am about convinced that the eyes are essential to picturing all the more intense emotions. However, there are other parts of the face and body that can give valuable co-operation in great emotional scenes, and can furthermore prove adequately effective on their own account where the actor is trying to indicate a physical condition rather than one of mind or soul.

The ancient Greeks had a very keen understanding of this, as is shown by their wonderfully expressive sculptorings. The tense lines around the athlete's mouth spoke eloquently of the agony of supreme physical effort just preceding fatigue. The tumbled arms and under the fold of drunken stupor. The knotted cords in the naked foot gave unmistakable evidence of pain. The corners of the mouth might droop weakly or the lips set in firm determination. All of this has a very large place in motion pictures.

The impossibility of employing spoken words makes it necessary to utilize the last ounce of pantomime expressiveness. One may get a great deal of this from the eyes, but that is not enough. There are other parts to be looked to as well. I have seen hands and fingers that were the embodiment of eloquence. One of the best death scenes I ever witnessed on the legitimate stage was just the hand of a drowning man showing above the edge of the bath. Anyone who has seen "Kismet" must remember this particular scene. Much may sometimes be told thru the droop of the shoulder or the tilt of the chin.

Since there is so much that counts, it is easy to understand why I should have said two talks back that any detailed analysis of the features, best given to screen results, is impossible.

RELIEF WORK IN NORTH IS GOING ALONG NICELY

Toronto Committee Has Only Been Asked for One Ship-ment So Far.

Reports received by the Northern Ontario fire relief committee from Northern Ontario show that relief work at all points is going along nicely. So far, owing to several days' supply being on hand at each station, the Toronto committee has only been called upon to make one shipment. It is expected, however, heavy shipments will be required early next week to take care of the relief work.

The committee has received a number of enquiries from Toronto and throughout the province as to where donations of clothing can be sent. It is expected that arrangements will be very shortly be completed for a central receiving station for such donations, an announcement of which will be made as early as possible. Responses to the committee's appeal for funds are now being received from many municipalities and boards of trade thru the country to the effect that as soon as the various executives and councils can be called together liberal assistance will be afforded.

There will be no Dominion Government representative in the Northern Ontario relief committee. Hon. Bob Rogers, acting prime minister, says he is willing that the committee already of the Ontario Government shall disburse the Dominion Government's $100,000 donation.

So far the Toronto committee has been called upon to make only one shipment to the north country, because several days' supplies were on hand at each station, and the fire. Next week, tho, it is expected heavy shipments will be required.

YACHT "SENECA" FOUND ON OTHER SIDE OF LAKE

Stranded on Sandbar Four Miles From Rochester—Thieves May Have Been Deserters.

After her mysterious disappearance a week ago, the Seneca, one-time winner of the Canada Cup, which was supposed to have been stolen from her moorings at the R.C.Y.C. docks, was found stranded on a sandbar four miles south-west of Sodus Bay, in Holland's Cove, near Rochester, N.Y., yesterday.

The thieves, who are presumed to have been deserters, abandoned the boat and swam to shore, going to the home of Alonzo Holland, where they posed as the owners of the yacht. Holland, after the men had left for Rochester, recognized the yacht and telegraphed Aomilus Jarvis, owner of the boat. George Christensen, caretaker of the yacht, has been sent to that place and is sailing the boat back to Toronto, while Mr. Jarvis has sworn out warrants for the arrest of the thieves.
