MAIDENS AND WIDOWS.
(From the Boston Statesman.)

I love the young. I love to see
The stifling of a thought of glee.
I love to watch clastic feet.
I inmanaged eyes, and mischief sweet.
I how to watch clastic feet,
I inmanaged eyes, and mischief sweet.
The music of a laugh untaught—
The reckless motion, liquid eye,
Bewitching tengue, and hussid reply—
To sit at eve with radiant girls,
And hide my hand in clustering curls—
And, oh, I worship as I bow
To a simple braid on snowy brow.
And yet—and yet—though bright they

To a simple braid on snowy brow.

And yet—and yet—though bright they at And holy, like an unseen star—
And though, as pure and perfect things, Their thoughts might wear unsullied win, Though this, all this, perhaps, is true, And more than poets dream of too—Yet to my taste (I'm twenty-three)
The chasten'd light of a widow's "ce"—The meek, subdued, angelio o'r,
Which flings a spirit's softness there—The deep composure that is brought __Upon the brow by too much thought—The gentle tone, the tear unbid,
They come o'er me like an eve in June,
Or a mournful note in a pleasant tune—And I would not give their calm repose
For the gayest smile on a lip of rese.

VARIETIES.

Estraordinary instance of voracity in a Stenlo. k.—
It has been remarked by fishermen and others residing on the shores of Lochfine, that within these dozen years there has been a wonderful decrease in the quantity of herrings taken; so much so, that what was formedly reckoned a tolerable vear is now of very rare occurrence. This falling off has been attributed to various causes, and, among these, steam navigation has not been forgotten. The true cause, however, appears to be the vast accumulation of eels, and with which it now swarms from top to bottom. Their conormous inroads upon the herring shoals may be estimated from the single circumstance that in one stenlock 12 herrings have been found, all entire, and in as good a state for use as if just taken from the net. When we consider the incalculable havock which this must produce, we may cease from wondering at the herrings descriting their old favorite resert. The instance of voracity, however, which we wish more particularly to mention, occurred lately, when, on opening an immense fish of the above description, there was found, besides nine herrings, a part of amold shoe and a family letter-hag, centaining a London newspaper, and a circular from the Scots Times, of which the following words were all that could be made out:— Sir, we hereby intimate, that unless your subscription to the Scots Times, which is now two years due, be instantly paid up, we shall be under the necessity of stopping the paper and prosecuting for the amount."—From the address being entirely obliterated, we are ignorant for what tartly subscriber it was intended. A return, however, from so singular a "Dend letter affice" struck us as a very unaccountable circumstance. We do not know what effect it may have upon some of universided.

Government Agent for Enangeants, the Allers being entirely obliterated, we are ignorant for volat tardy subscriber it was intended. A return however, from so singular a "Donal letter office" stress as a very unaccountable circumstance. We do not know what effect it may have upon souls of our subscribers.

RUIND CITIES.—The tradition of roined ciri is is common to all countries. In Corawall it is believed than the land formerly extended many roiles farther than at present, and that some of the neighboring is hands formed part of the Continent. On the coast of Brittany there is a tradition that a city now destroyed by the sea, once exceeded in magniference the present enpiral of France. The same story is related in Corawall and Somerest, On the coast of North Wides, the present inhabitants say that about the year 2000 A. D., a great number of cities and the whole of a tract called the Lowland Hundred were destroyed, and now form part of the Bay of Cardigan. On the coast of Saffolk, Dunwich, or the splendid city is anid formely to have contained 52 churches and monastries, which have been swallowed up by the sea; and excending the contained to the present inhabitants and the whole of a tract called the Lowland Hundred were destroyed, and now form part of the Bay of Cardigan. of this Province that attention which its importance demands; and the premiums, for fire insurances parlicularly, bear so very small a proportion to the value of the property insured, that note less sympathy is felt for those sufferers who may have neglected to awail themselves of the means of providing against such calamities.

The expiral of this Company, $200,000, has been all paid in, and invested in the best securities; independently of which, a SURPLUS FIERD of more than $33,000 has been set apart to meet the occasional claims for losses, and the stock hears a high premium.

The Agent will at all times attend personally to the survey of buildings on which insurance is desired within the City; and applications in writing (post paid) from all other parts of the Province, describing the situation and the property to be insured, will secrive prompt attention.
