Thursday night, at the Lowell A. C., Jerry Gaines and Joe Geary, the middle-weights, who recently furnished a sensational eight-round bout, will meet in a 12-round bout. The distance is long enough to suit both, and if they make half as good a fight Thursday night as they made at the Armory Club, Boston, the Lowell followers will have little cause to kick.

Nelson and Three. Nelson and Three.

On Friday night the Armory A. A. will hold an open amateur show in the following classes: 115, 135 and 145. Three special bouts will also be decided. Saturday, Battling Nelson will make another attempt to come back. Nelson has agreed to take on no less than three men, all of whom are of a mediocre calibre. A defeat from any one of the three would eliminate any further opportunity that the Battler might seek.

Tony Caponi's Record

Tony Caponi is without question one of the toughest middle-weights in the states today. For the last nine years the Chicago boxer has met about all the top-notchers in the game, and, while he has not won in all his bouts, he carried the other fellows along fast enough to make them sidestep another meeting.

Caponi from his start in the game has fought good ones and never in his life has he faced easy game. A glance at his record will show that he has travelled hard road in his fight toward the middle-weight throne.

He has met George Gunther, Hugo Kelly, Larry Temple, Young Mahoney, Billy Papke three times, Eddie McGoorty, the Oshkosh boxer who looms up as a possible contender for middle-weight honors, Montana Jack Sullivan, Stanley Ketchell and Sam Langford. Caponi gave these men all they bargained for. His bout with Ketchell was one of the greatest ever witnessed in the west. Caponi is a young fellow yet and still has hopes of annexing the crown.
