French troops since their entrance into the battle on last Saturday have made a courageous defence, but none was more so than that of Mont Didler. Driven from the town and some distance west ward by overwhelming numbers, the French counter-attacked and captured and held three towns west of Mont Didier. Meanwhile, another French force struck along a front of six miles for istance of more than one mile. This gain not only menaces the southern leg of the salient, but also the German gains around Mont Didier, where the enemy has driven a small and precarious wedge.

East of Noyon, in a counter part of their effort along the Scarpe the enemy is attempting to force a passage of the Oise. General Petain's defence, however, has been too strong and the Germans have been thrown back with heavy
