Labor Bureau Issues List of Prices in Both Countries

Extends Over a Period of Five Years and Shows That Canadian Farmer Gets Less For His Products Than American, While the Canadian Consumer Pays More Than the One Across the Border—Middlemen to Blame.

Ottawa, Aug. 11.—One of the most illuminating reports on the literature dealing with the economic aspect of the reciprocity agreement has just been issued by the labor department, and has been mailed today to every newspaper office in Canada.

It is the compendium of comparative prices in Canada and the United States for agricultural, fisheries, lumber and mine products covered by the schedules of the agreement, and to which reference was made some days ago by Hon. Mackenzie King.

It covers 812 pages and is a veritable mine of wealth for political candidates, campaign speakers, editorial writers and all students of the vital point at issue in the discussion of the agreement, namely, as the economic effect reciprocity in natural products will have on both producers and consumers in Canada.

The comparative statistics of market prices at representative points on each side of the border, gathered from reliable daily market reports cover the past five and a half years, thus giving a true index as to the average prices.

Halifax, St. John and Montreal prices are compared with those of Boston and New York, Toronto with Buffalo and Detroit, and Winnipeg with Chicago, Minneapolis and Duluth.

In general, it may be stated that the most significant conclusions to be drawn from the voluminous and comprehensive statistics of the report are that prices received by the producers in Canada, affected by the agreement, are on the whole considerably below those received by producers in the United States, while in many instances the prices paid by the consumer in Canada are above those paid in the United States.

The first conclusion bears out the argument that the farmer and the fisherman will greatly benefit from reciprocity. The second conclusion bears out the argument that the Canadian consumer is in many cases suffering from undue enhancement of prices by the middleman, a condition of affairs which reciprocity will tend to obviate and which explains the opposition of certain interests to the pact.

Comparative prices for fish indicate the immense benefit which will accrue to the fisherman in the American market will confer on the Maritimes Provinces.

Halifax at Halifax averaged during the five and a half years 2.2 cents per lb. as compared with 14.75 cents per lb. at Boston; cod at Halifax averaged 3.62 cents per lb. as compared with 7 cents at Boston; mackerel at Halifax averaged 1.8 cents per lb. as compared with 33 cents at Boston.

Drinking operations, suspended on the west side on Wednesday, were, as a result of instructions given by Hon. Mr. Pugsley to the resident engineer, resumed yesterday afternoon. The dredge troops resumed work, and the Scotia and Beacon Bay will resume operations this morning.
