The Daily Tribune.

ST. JOHN, N. B., SEPT. 23, 1872.

Mr. John Livingston resigned his position as Editor of THE DAILY TRIBUNE on Monday last. The paper will be issued for the present under the editorial management of Mr. W. B. McSweeney.

Mr. Melburne Melod has assumed the Business Management of THE DAILY TRIBUNE, and he alone is authorized to make contracts, receive and pay money, and transact business in any way connected with its finances.

A letter appeared in the Globe and also in the Telegraph and News last week, referring to the cases which compelled Mr. John Livingston, late editor of this paper, to go into the Insolvent Court. The letter is signed by Mr. Silas Alward, Mr. Livingston's Solicitor, and we give the following explanatory extract from it:

"The liabilities now to be wiped out, I may explain, are a legacy left from the old Telegraph debts. When Mr. Livingston sold to Mr. Eldor he asked and received a price which he believed at the time would cover everything he had become liable for in the building up of that paper, and in this he had miscalculated."

Mr. Livingston's connection with the DAILY TRIBUNE was simply in an editorial capacity, for which he was paid a salary, and he never at any time had any interest in the proprietorship of this journal.

Our City Rulers.

All large cities at some period of their existence become the prey of sharpers, who fasten themselves upon every available spot from which profit can be extracted, and the City purse depleted of the public funds.

In Chicago, confinement in Gaol was the only punishment that a majority of the Council Board could appreciate. In New York the Tammany Ring, and their doings are too fresh in the public mind to need comment. Tweed's famous "What are you going to do about it?" will be ever remembered as a public expression of disregard of public opinion. But Saint John is not without a disciple of the Tweed tactics. The last meeting held by the Common Council promises to give that discreditable combination greater notoriety than they care about.

The particular matter of the state of the streets in the City came under discussion, and as nearly all the streets in the City are in a state of chaos and disorder, that discussion of the learned and deliberative body of which our Council is composed, has excited a good deal of comment. We believe the Street Committee is composed of Councillors Flagg, Coxeter, and Cassidy. The last two members assert that Councillor Flagg assumes not only their powers, but acts as City Engineer, Street Superintendent, and general conservator of public ways. With a coolness and disregard of public opinion worthy of Tweed in his palmiest days, Councillor Flagg one day last week ordered the Northern side of the King street sidewalk to be shaved off six feet, and had not an impromptu meeting of property holders been immediately convened on the spot who drove the workmen off, the already narrow enough sidewalk would Legislature to pass. Parliament was puzzled for a time as to the best course to take on a question of so delicate a character. It was suggested that the Queen should be petitioned in favor of such an amendment of the British North America Act, as would enable our Parliament to compel the New Brunswick Legislature to correct what was very generally acknowledged to be a wrongful act of legislation. This course, however, was not taken. The House agreed to accept a motion made by Mr. Cahy, expressing regret at the action of the Legislature, and a hope that the Act complained of would be repealed; also the subsequent suggestion offered by Mr. Mackenzie, that the opinion of the Law Officers of the Crown in England should be taken upon the points in dispute.

It was hoped that this temperate action would have produced a soothing effect in New Brunswick. We find, however, that this has not been the case. There is a very general disposition throughout the Province to refuse payment of what is called "an oppressive and iniquitous tax." Of $73,000 for which St. John has been assessed, only $6,000 have been paid; the County of Gloucester has refused to make any assessment; several assessments have been obtained; and in the city an order has been issued from the municipal authorities for taking any measures to enforce the tax. It is not stated upon what grounds the order has been secured, but, doubtless, they are similar to those, whatever they may be, upon which the assessments have been quashed in other places.

This is a most unsatisfactory state of things, and it is to be hoped will not lead to any serious difficulties. If the members of the Legislature are wise, they will hasten to repeal an Act which is bigoted and unjust, if not absolutely unjust. We have no idea that the Law Officers of the Crown will give as their opinion that the Act is unconstitutional; but the Legislature will do a wise thing to act in the spirit of the resolution adopted at the last session by the House of Commons.

Nursery Rhymes, No. 16.

THE TURTLE.

Down King street once I wandered, while before me there meandered A turtle, and I thought that I'd noticed one before.

And I wished it going sailing, as if it were some skipping, Like a water, near proud Ommelet's shore.

"The turtle," said I, "is a 'shellback' sporting on the public's shore."

This is an amusing rhyme.
