

That Hacking Cough! Keeps You Awake at Night?

Then Get Rid Of It.

Stop and consider that neglected coughs and colds, if not cured immediately, are followed by Bronchitis, Pneumonia, Catarrh, and Consumption. Better cure your cold now with a few doses of

DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP.

It is a pleasant, safe, and effectual medicine that may be confidently relied upon.

Mrs. Brenton Smith, Pembroke, N.S., writes:—"Some time ago I was troubled with a bad cough, and thought I would try your valuable cough mixture, Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. I purchased a bottle, and as soon as I began taking it I could tell it was helping me. I kept on, and in a short time my cough was cured. I would advise anyone suffering with a cough to get a bottle, for it will soothe, heal and cure."

Price 25 cents.

Get Dr. Wood's. Refuse substitutes.

THE T. MILBURN CO., LIMITED,
TORONTO, ONT.

In the Squab Loft.

It cannot too often be said that untrained pigeons in a loft can do more harm to the workers than can be estimated in a few words, says the Feather. Never allow untrained or non-working pigeons to stay in the squab loft with the active producers. If you intend keeping any of the young squabs you grow for breeders remove them into a separate loft as soon as they are weaned and able to care for themselves.

When to Build a Henhouse.

Poultry houses should never be built so late in the season that time will not permit them to be thoroughly dried before the winter season sets in.

BEWARE OF OINTMENTS FOR CATARRH THAT CONTAIN MERCURY.

As mercury will destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free. Sold by Druggists. Price 75c. per bottle.

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Chickens and Bacteria.

Some German experiments are reported in which chicks were hatched out and fed in such a way and under such conditions as to exclude all bacteria, says American Poultry Journal. The chicks ate well and regularly and apparently digested their food normally. Nevertheless they did not gain in weight and died after about twenty days. Upon examination the droppings were found free from bacteria. Other chicks fed normally gained about three times their original weight during the same period. Part of the chicks used in the test were inoculated with intestinal bacteria from normal chicks, after which they soon became strong and gained in weight.

HOW PNEUMONIA STARTS.

You catch a little cold to-day, by to-morrow it has reached the throat, next day the lungs are affected, and you wish you had used "Catarrh-zone," which kills colds in five minutes. In the first place Catarrh-zone soothes the irritated membranes and relieves congestion—then it cuts out the phlegm and destroys the germs. It enables the blood to retain a natural supply of oxygen, lung-food, and vitality. In any cough, bronchitis or lung affection it's guaranteed to positively cure. Decline any substitute for "Catarrh-zone."

A fire may gain great headway, but when the engines come it then feels quite put out about it.

I was cured of a bad case of Grip by MINARD'S LINIMENT.

Sydney C. B.

I was cured of loss of voice by MINARD'S LINIMENT.

Yarmouth.

I was cured of Sciatic Rheumatism by MINARD'S LINIMENT.

Barin, Nfld.

LEWIS S. BUTLER.

Barin, Nfld.

Some false teeth look so natural that they ought to ache.

AN AMUSING TOY.

The Way to Make and Use the Trick Blowpipe.

Take an ordinary tobacco pipe and stop the bowl with a tightly fitting cork. The pipe may be either a wooden or a clay one, but it should be new and clean.

Bore a small hole through the cork, near one side, just big enough to hold a straw. The straw should be a little longer than the cork, and at the top it should be slit down an inch or so and the pieces spread out in the form of a funnel.

Or you may use a small glass tube with a little paper funnel pasted to the top of it. If the straw or tube does not

BLOWPIPE AND GALLOWES.

At the hole exactly a little wax at the top will make the joint air tight. Now take another cork, cut it down to a round ball as big as a small marble, "a niggler," and pierce it through the center with a long hairpin from which you have broken off the greater part of one leg. The straight end should stick farther out of the ball than the other, so that the hooked end will be higher and will stay on top. Now in the other side of the large cork nearest the stem of the pipe stick a long wire, bent over and above and ending in a hook exactly over the little funnel and three or four inches above it.

Then drop the cork ball into the funnel, put the pipe to your lips and blow. Your breath rushing up the little tube will lift the light ball and keep it dancing in the air for a second or two. When it falls the funnel catches it, and your breath sends it up again.

The trick is to make the hook attached to the ball catch on the hook above so that the ball remains suspended; that is all.—New York Mail.

SPELLING GAMES.

A Good Way For Girls and Boys to Amuse Themselves.

There are several kinds of spelling games which can be played in the same way, one of the most amusing being as follows: A long word, such as "catastrophe," is given out, and each player writes it down at the top of his paper. Five minutes are given in which to write down any words which can be made out of the letters in "catastrophe" which begin with the letter C (such as cat, cot, cast, cate, cape, cape, cost). When this is over the same thing is done with the next letter, and all the players write down A, with A, ate, ape, etc., underneath.

When the word is finished one of the party reads aloud the words he has found, and every one runs a line through any word of which he has the duplicate. Each player reads aloud in turn, and a mark is allowed for words which no one else has thought of. If possible, the selected word should be one in which no letter occurs twice.

Another variation of the spelling game is called the "cate" game. A quarter of an hour is given, in which all the players have to write down as many words as they can think of ending in "cate," such as delicate, advocate, vacate, and at the end of the time one of the company reads the words aloud. If more than one person has thought of a word it does not count. The prize is given to the person who has found out more words than any one else.

A Soap Bubble Party.

Did you ever give a soap bubble party for your little friends? It is very amusing, and this is how you set about it:

Have five rings made of cardboard and wound round with tissue paper of bright colors in a doorway, suspended in a row by strings.

Each ring should measure about seven to nine inches across, but they need not all be the same size.

Have ready some bowls of strong soapuds in which a teaspoonful of glycerin has been dissolved and as many clay pipes as will be needed for yourself and your guests.

The players take turns in blowing their bubbles through the rings, and the one who succeeds in getting the most through without breaking them is declared the winner and gains a prize.

The Shortest Day.

A little day ran past Without a word from me; I thought it ran too fast, But that could hardly be.

Because a little boy next door, they say, found time to speak a happy word that day.

A little day was spent Almost before I knew; I wondered where it went, And so, indeed, would you, if at a sudden, at the set of sun, you found how very little you had done.

Work W. 1904 in Youth's Companion.

When Sickness Comes

There's always a need for Armour's Extract of Beef. It keeps up vitality and prevents excessive loss of flesh and strength. Its rich beefy flavor makes beef tea that is as appetizing as it is delicious and stimulating.

Sold by all Druggists and Grocers.

ARMOUR LIMITED, TORONTO.

Beef powder and extract for soups.

"Beef" as a Speaker.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he frankly read the rest of them to the House, who cheered him more loudly than they are accustomed to cheer in that august chamber.—London Chronicle.

Notes often save a man from disaster, as they did the late Commander-in-Chief when he made his maiden speech in the House of Lords. As if to prove that physical courage has little to do with the successful accomplishment of such an ordeal, Lord Roberts was obviously nervous, and had not been speaking more than a couple of minutes when he totally forgot what he had intended to say. He began a search for his manuscript, which was of course in the last pocket in which he looked. And having found the right place in his notes he