

Deranged Nerves AND Weak Spells.

Dr. R. H. Sampson's, Sydney, N.S., Advice to all Sufferers from Nerve Trouble is

"GET A BOX OF MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS."

He says: "I have been ailing for about a year from deranged nerves, and very often weak spells would come over me and be so bad that I sometimes thought I would be unable to survive them. I have been treated by doctors and have taken numerous preparations but none of them helped me in the least. I finally got a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. Before taking them I did not feel able to do any work, but now I can work as well as ever, thanks to one box of your pills. They have made a new man of me, and my advice to any person troubled as I was, is to get a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills."

WHEN BOYS WERE MEN

By John Habberton.
Author of "Helen's Babies," "George Washington," Etc.

Copyright, 1901, by John Habberton.

Fighting with fence rails as weapons was new to us, but we took to it kindly. We had to. They demanded a lot of free space, which was not always to be had, for the tree trunks would not get out of our way, and some of us came to grief while downed by our weapons having collided with trees. Once I rushed to Brainerd's assistance, supposing him in deadly peril, for two of the few remaining Johnnies closed on him with their bayonets ready to lunge.
But Brainerd turned like a teetotum, holding his rail horizontally. It struck one of the Johnnies and knocked him down. In an instant Brainerd jumped and landed with both feet on the stomach of the fallen man. He also said, "I beg your pardon," but the fallen man's reply was couched in language unfit for publication. Then Brainerd's rail struck the other man below the belt, and he, too, fell. Sergeant Mick saw the encounter and screamed: "Hooray, Brainerd! Ye little divil!
I'll thrall ye up to the lightweight championship av Ameriky whin we git back to Summertown."

About this time there was a visible scarcity of Johnnies in fighting trim.
In fact, there was but one—the only officer who seemed to be with the party.
He had an eye like a hawk and had dashed to and fro as rapidly as if trying to learn our number and resources.
Suddenly it occurred to him that he had done and learned all in his power and that it was time to return. I tried to head him off and bring my rail to bear upon him. At the same moment Mick roared:

"Grab their muskets at their ammunition! Git back to the fence an' foire wid 'em as fast as yez kin! Niver mould aimin', but make all the noise yez kin, so they'll think we're beginnin' their skirmishers an' are beginnin' the fight ag'in!"

Fully half of us had had some mil-lita practice with muskets, and all the others had used muzzle loaders against large or small game before the war, so we made quite a racket, which, to my delight, caused the enemy to break into companies and move to the rear under the natural impression that their skirmishers had been overcome and we had resumed business at the old stand.
But I was still in chase of the officer.
Once I succeeded in knocking him down by tripping him, but he was on his feet again in an instant. Suddenly I saw Sergeant Mick near me, brandishing his severed arm. The sleeve had fallen from it, and it was really a slightly though displaced human member. I would give half my possessions and hopes for one like it, for 'twas a mass of muscle, with an elbow joint as big and protuberant as a cobblestone.
Mick raised it to the position of "rear out against cavalry" and landed it fairly on the back of the officer's neck.
The officer instantly landed on his own back, and the fight for the fence was over. Then Mick looked across the fence, saw the retreating enemy and croaked:

"They've throwed up the sponge!
Niver mould the killed an' wounded just yet. Look quick to the Johnnies, as was punched wid the fence rail!
Glory be to the polkes av auld Orland! An' tie the han's an' fate av thim that's gittin' over bein' groggy."

We obeyed orders and found some very sick men, whom we bound so they could not get away when they recovered.
Then we did our best for the wounded. Mick had already sent another mounted messenger in search of the regiment to report that the enemy was retreating, and there was a fine chance for a chase and a charge. But the regiment was not found. It found us two hours later. The affair appeared to have been one of many of its kind, in which an advance of the enemy, reconnoitering in force, had been reported so imperfectly by negroes from beyond the lines that our regiment had taken the wrong road, found nothing and, like many times before, curse "the reliable contraband" and grumbled at a long, hard ride for nothing. But they buried the enemy's dead for us, which was great comfort, for to kill a man and then have to bury him is worse than war. I think it's worse than hell.

"Hadin't you better go back to camp, sergeant, now that the fuss is over?" suggested Brainerd as we waited for the regiment. "Your wound needs attention."

Mick did not seem to hear. He was leaning against his horse, looking tenderly at his severed arm, and we heard him say, as if he were alone with it:
"Ah, Norah, little did yez iver know av the strength ye was puttin' into that arm whin 'twas around yer swate waist!"

CHAPTER XXI.

A CHAT WITH THE COLONEL.

OR Brainerd's sake I was glad the fight had occurred, for it seemed to me that it should have put Phil Hamilton's possible chance out of his mind. But as soon as we reached camp the few sick list men and shirkers who had remained behind began to croak a story supposed to have filtered from the colonel's tent through several intermediaries that the colonel had been in a rage about the explosions of my relics in our old camp, that had made him sup-

NO CHAIN IS STRONGER THAN ITS WEAKEST LINK NO MAN IS STRONGER THAN HIS STOMACH D'PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY MAKES WEAK STOMACHS STRONG

pose the enemy were shelling us as we evacuated the post, and that he was going to make an example of the guilty party. Sure enough, we had not been in camp more than two hours when the orderly sergeant of our company came to our tent and said:

"The colonel wants to see you two at once."

We looked at each other and tried to smile, but failed.

"It seems to me," said I, "that our share of the fight at the fence ought to mitigate our punishment—I mean my own punishment, for you did nothing in that shell affair but tell about it, like a fool, I suppose that even now you'll try to make the colonel believe that you had some share in it, so as to shield me."

"I wish I could," replied Brainerd meekly. "I wish I hadn't told of it when the colonel was so mystified about the shots, but really it did seem for the good of the service."

"You're too good to live," said I.
"Come along. I hope you'll come in for some share of the punishment, you unspeakable lunatic!"

Nevertheless for a corporal to be summoned by his colonel has a sobering effect, so I fought down my feelings and tried to assume a bold front as I dragged Brainerd across the parade ground.

"Pass them in, sentry," said the colonel from the open front of his tent as we drew near. We stopped at the tent flaps, saluted and stood at "attention."
"Come in, gentlemen," said the colonel, with an odd smile which nevertheless seemed not ugly. "Sit down."

Both of us dropped nervously on the colonel's camp bed, the only seat visible.
The colonel was handling some papers which I promptly assumed were court martial charges against us.
"I was greatly surprised and still pleased," continued the colonel, still handling the papers, "at receiving today commissions for both of you—commissions as first lieutenants."

I looked at Brainerd, and Brainerd looked at me, and I don't understand why both of us did not drop dead with astonishment. The colonel went on:

"I had hoped to promote both of you in the course of time, after you had reached sergeant's grade—Brainerd, because of your rescuing your party from the enemy after capture and for getting that dispatch through to the left a few nights ago, and, Frost, because I've learned that you spent a lot of money in trying to get recruits for the regiment at the time you entered it. I'm not the only influence with the appointing power. Political and other strings are being pulled for scores of my noncommissioned officers, and some of this sort of work seems to have been done for you boys."

To Be Continued.

IN WARM WEATHER

Use Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets and you won't be Troubled with Biliousness or Dyspepsia.

Does this warm weather make you feel Dyspeptic and Bilious?
I shouldn't. Joseph Leake, 194 McCaul street, Toronto, pressman in The News office, tells us why.
"I have been troubled for three years with Dyspepsia and Biliousness," says Mr. Leake. "I took several medicines, but none would cure me till I tried Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets.
One box of them cured me."

"My daughter, who was troubled with Headaches and Dyspepsia, also used Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets and was cured."
Other people who have used Dodd's Dyspepsia Tablets, tell the same story.
You haven't used them, or you wouldn't be feeling Bilious and Dyspeptic. They never fail to cure and cure permanently.

Success comes to those who wait, frees their hustle while waiting.

Micard's Liniment Cures Distemper

WANT $15,000,000.

CONSOLIDATED LAKE SUPER- IOR COMPANY.

Plan to Issue Trust Bonds to Shareholders at 60 Per Cent., Bearing Four Per cent. Interest—A Crisis in the Company's Affairs.

Philadelphia, July 10.—Unable to realize the funds necessary to take up the $5,000,000 in loans held by the New York Banking Syndicate, and to secure cash absolutely needed for working capital, the directors of the Consolidated Lake Superior Company, after an extended meeting, decided on an appeal to the stockholders as a last resort. Unless the latter meet the emergency a reorganization and the possibility of a receivership seem certain. The plan proposed is to create $15,000,000 in 30-year four per cent. bonds, $12,500,000 of which are to be offered to the stockholders, at $600 on the $1,000. Each holder of eighty shares of stock is to be given the privilege of subscribing to one $1,000 bond, $600. Large subscriptions are to be made on the same ratio.
The balance of the $15,000,000 bond issue is to remain in the treasury for future use.

The first $5,500,000 of the money to be raised by this bond issue is to be used to repay the temporary loan to the New York Syndicate. The stock, bonds, mortgages, etc., now held by the syndicate, and which practically constitute the available collateral of the corporation, are to be redeemed and held as security to the bondholders. The balance of the money to be raised by this bond issue is to be used for working capital.

The appeal to the stockholders indicates that the New York Syndicate, which holds the temporary loan, practically has Consolidated Lake Superior under its thumb. The syndicate was willing to extend the time of the loan to January, and to loan $750,000 additional, but the directors concluded that at least $2,500,000 will be needed immediately for working capital. Various ways of raising the money have been suggested, but have not been successful. It is estimated that if the loan can be made and the needed capital provided, the company will show $300,000 in net earnings on January 1, and $500,000 will be required to meet the interest on the bonds, leaving a handsome surplus.

Dodd's Kidney Pills Credited with Another Victory over Lumbago

John Ball, a Quebec Bricklayer, tells how his Troubles Vanished When He Tried the Great Canadian Kidney Remedy.

Quebec, July 6.—Special.—One more remarkable cure has been marked up to the credit of Dodd's Kidney Pills in this city. John Ball, bricklayer, of 57 Little Champlain Street, is the man cured. Interviewed regarding the matter he said:

"I have been troubled with Lumbago for two years and could not do my work. I was also suffering from urinary troubles and had to get up at night so much that my rest was spoiled."

"I bought one box of Dodd's Kidney Pills and after I had used them began to see and feel a change. I have used three boxes and I am now cured."

Similar cures by Dodd's Kidney Pills are reported so frequently that it seems safe to say that Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure any form of Kidney Complaint or any disease caused by disordered Kidneys.
