

[Readers of the Union will be interested in the following beautiful picture, from a sketch by Miss Katherine Conway, from a letter received from the Hon. Alice Seymour, late English aristocrat in the imperial family of Austria, and now the guest of the Sisters of St. Joseph, Nazareth, Convent, Rochester. This accomplished lady is an American by birth and education. She is known in the world of letters as "Octavia Hensel." It is a valuable correspondence of the New York Home Journal and the San Francisco Chronicle.—Ed. C. U.]

The town of Gundern, in the foot of the lake, about an hour's drive from Villa. The carriage road lies along the shore of the beautiful Traunsee, a paradise of loveliness; every moment filled with scenes worthy of approach to the gates of heaven, and from the delirious joy of the imperial children, who visited the Carmelite convent is but one, one would suppose we were going to the region of the blessed. This morning after lunch, the little princess bled into my room exclaiming "Mais quel air!" "Come, lady, we are going to spend the afternoon at the convent." "The Carmelite?" I asked, hardly daring to hope such good fortune was mine. How often have I read of these saintly women, their utter self-renunciation, sufferings and Christ-like patience and for those who sin—the perfect seclusion of their lives—their privations—their unending prayers for the world's people.

"Yes—the Carmelites," it was her highness the Archduchess, who was special dispensation and are allowed to visit the Sisters." "Oh, then," said I, "and you lady shall accompany me."

This is the title by which the princesses are designated.

We left the Villa about three o'clock. It was a golden September day, the waters of the Traunsee seemed transfused by the breeze into a floor of rippling mounds, and the glorious mountain of Sleeping Turk rose in giant masses of rock far above the massive frowning sides, but before us was an immense superb valley we passed, for this portion Salzkammergut is the favorite of the imperial families of Austria.

The convent is situated upon the rising ground near the old church of the village, and from the village street beyond the bridge over the river Traun. It seems a very unpretending wall built of stone, but covered with mosaic colored with a pale yellow stone above the roof. The entrance door is two or three steps above the level of the street.

The nuns had been notified of our so when the footman rang at the door so we instantly opened and we entered a dim cloister-like vestibule paved with brick, with white-washed walls of olden times, and a large crucifix in the center.

The portress was a woman of sixty years of age. Never have I seen such a face on any human being. The dawn of Angelhood is witness dear old lady knew the Archduchess and raised her hand to her lips, her young Princess hastily withdrew her face and bent her head as if in reverence to one who she acknowledged her.

We went at once to the chapel, a stone cell-like apartment in the story.

There are no seats in it, a raised platform about two feet broad runs the room, and upon this fifteen or twenty nuns were kneeling at prayer.

disturb them, she knelt down from whence she came. When little princesses and the young archduchesses were said their Hail Mary's, I could help raising my eyes to the kneeling figures about the room.

were clad in habits of a coarse brown so wily and rough that it scratched eyes even to look at it.

THE EXILES FROM ACADIA.

The Madawaska settlement in Canada, near the old church of the village, and from the village street beyond the bridge over the river Traun. It seems a very unpretending wall built of stone, but covered with mosaic colored with a pale yellow stone above the roof. The entrance door is two or three steps above the level of the street.

They have no genius for accumulation, desire for improvement. The born without ambition, and contented with the lot of the poor.

They are Catholics, and the churches have erected are in striking contrast with the prevailing architecture. A school on the New Brunswick river are noted throughout.

The Night Before the Mowing.

All shimmering in the morning shine
And diamonded with dew,
And quivering in the scented wind,
That thrills its green heart through;
The little field, the smiling field,
With all its flowers lowly,
How happy looks the golden field,
The day before the mowing!

Outspread 'neath the departing light,
Twilight will ever stay,
Save where, low westerning, Venus hides
From the red eye of Mars;
How quiet lies the silent field,
With all its beauties glowing,
Just stirring like a child asleep,
The night before the mowing.

Sharp steel, inevitable hand,
Cut keen, cut kind! Our field
We know full well must be laid low
Before its wealth it yield:
Labor and mirth and plenty bring
Its blanching death a twining;
And yet we weep, and yet we weep,
The night before the mowing.

DANIEL MULLOCH CRAIG.

GRAND SPEECH OF A. M. SULLIVAN.

In the House of Commons on Thursday night Sir W. Harcourt, illustrating the objects of the Corcoran Bill, referred to the proceedings of the "Skirmishing Fund" in New York, and read extracts from the speeches of Devoy and other members of the Land League in the United States, threatening revenge for the wrongs of Ireland by assassination and wholesale arson. For language of this kind the Land League in Ireland must be held responsible, unless it repudiated the American Land League. The bill was intended to deal with the emissaries of the men who avowed these atrocious designs, the enemies of society, who ought to be crushed like a pest of vipers.

Mr. A. M. Sullivan said the Government had been continually shifting their ground to find an excuse for this Corcoran Bill, and the House had now heard the last edition from the Home Secretary (Home Rule) Mr. Chamberlain. At first it was stated that the bill was to enable the Government to arrest the "villainous ruffians" who were committing crimes, but who could not be convicted. This ground had been deserted for others during the progress of the bill, and at length the Government, after all its excuses had been exposed for this scandalous measure, had put up the Home Secretary to stifle the House with the lugubrious Mr. John Devoy (laughter). The Home Secretary had posed as the champion of religion, and had expressed his horror at the French revolutionary party. But who had been the friends of Mazzini? Did not Lord Ellenborough call for a million of money to support secret societies in Italy? What part did Earl Russell play towards the Revolvers of his day (cheers)? It did not lie on the lips of those who FETTERED GIBBARD! to reproach any one for committing with Gibbard's colleague (cheers). Were hon. members opposed to their sympathy with Gibbard (cheers from the Liberal benches)? Then this was only one further instance of the Treasury bench not representing the views of its supporters. The Home Secretary had given a relapse of the Skirmishing Fund as if it were something new. But it had existed for five years. The late Home Secretary knew all about it, and did not think it necessary to call attention to it in the House, though just as sincere a servant of his sovereign as the present Home Secretary, who now did so for a purely melodramatic purpose (Home Rule) (cheers). There would always be such societies in America as long as misgovernment continued in Ireland. For some of these men he could only find

AN EXCUSE IN THE FANATICISM OF DESPAIR.

As regards others he declined to palliate their conduct or their words. It would be long remembered with sorrow, by hon. members sitting opposite, that it was reserved for a Liberal Government to bring forward as an excuse for coercion what a Conservative ministry had deemed unworthy of notice (cheers). It would be a most cruel act to hold the Irish people responsible for what men beyond their reach and influence might do (Home Rule) (cheers). The bad laws by which England had driven the Irish from their homes to America and elsewhere in times past were responsible for the elements of danger, mischief and harm which the Government now found in

THE MILLIONS OF IRISH EMIGRANTS in the United States (Home Rule) (cheers). The Home Secretary had tried to frighten the House by quoting the language of John Devoy. It was a dreadful thing in John Devoy to talk of assassinating political ministers, but when last October the Rev. Mr. Kane, a Protestant clergyman, publicly and deliberately advised the murder of Roman Catholic priests by way of reprisals, the Chief Secretary—the supposed "man of peace" in the Cabinet—condoned the incitement to crime (loud Irish cheers). The Bishop of Down acted more creditably than the Chief Secretary, for he did call on Mr. Kane to retract (cheers). In reference to Mr. Devoy and others in America, he (Mr. Sullivan) knew nothing of them. When Mr. Parnell went to America to establish a Land League the hon. member did not consult him—he believed the hon. member was in the habit of taking his own course—(laughter)—but he could have told him that his electric gathering of men in America was patriotic, no doubt, in purpose, but that for his part, should have considered the impracticable and dangerous (cheers, hear, hear). At the same time, judging by the reports in the public press, he believed that

MR. PARNELL GOING TO AMERICA had the idea of bringing over those men to perceive that the Land League by constitutional means would protect the people, and that the practice of resorting to reprisals was unnecessary (hear, hear). For one man of that school of politics in America who came into the Land League there came in seven who repudiated Mr. John Devoy; and the latter chose to go back to his old skirmishing field, and said, "We'll lay London in ashes." He (Mr. Sullivan) was surprised that a responsible minister of the Crown should have lent himself to this scare. His last words upon this weary Corcoran Bill would be that in his opinion it is he had simply done his duty to his country, for when they brought it to the Government declined at the same time to lay the Land Bill before the House, Ireland was first to strip her back to the source and afterwards she would be told what the ministry in their pleasure would bestow on her. It was this disastrous error on the part of the Government that roused him to opposition. During these six weeks of respite, in which the wicked might have fled—(cheers)—the country had had time to measure the full effects of this legislation. His fervent hope was that in the breathing time procured for her by the determined stand of those here, Ireland might have cause to see that her best hope lay in keeping within constitutional lines in her agitation.

AN ENGLISH BISHOP ON IRELAND.

Brave Words from Bishop Bagshawe.

GROWING SENTIMENT IN ENGLAND IN FAVOR OF IRELAND'S CAUSE.

A lecture on "Ireland, Society and Politically," was recently delivered in the Albert Hall, Nottingham, by the Hon. member for Mayo. The chair on the occasion was occupied by the Catholic Bishop, the Most Rev. Dr. Bagshawe.

The Chairman said he had very great pleasure in introducing to the meeting the guest of the evening—a gentleman who had distinguished himself both by his eloquence and by his services to his country—Mr. O'Connor Power (loud applause). It was now about a year since at a large meeting in Nottingham he (the chairman) did what he could, in conjunction with others, to make known to his fellow-townsmen the cruel wrongs which had afflicted, and still most grievously afflicted, our Catholic fellow-subjects in Ireland.

He little thought then that a knowledge of those wrongs and a deep sympathy with the victims of them would so rapidly spread over England and take such a deep hold of the minds of vast numbers of Englishmen (hear, hear) as had been the case within the last twelve months. He blessed God that, through that increasing knowledge and sympathy, powerful advocates had been raised up in England for the much-enduring Irish people—advocates who must and would be listened to (loud applause), and who would not be silent (renewed applause) until the unjust laws which for centuries had caused such misery were repealed, and had given place to others under which the people of Ireland might be able to live in their own land in the peaceful and secure possession of their homes and earnings (applause). The object of their meeting that night was the same as that of the last night—namely, to make known more completely and more widely the evils under which Ireland now suffered. They were not met to discuss any political programme or to promote directly any political measure. The threatened Corcoran Bill rendered the delivery of the lecture even more opportune than it otherwise would have been. The English Parliament and the English people were to be asked to give to Ireland, by way of a first instalment of the long-desired and promised relief, a measure by which her people would be engaged and bound, DEPRIVED OF THE RIGHTS OF FREE MEN, and especially of the precious right of holding public meetings for the redress of grievances (loud cries of "Shame!"), and would be delivered over, as it were, to the bound hand and foot, to the tender mercies of angry and vindictive oppressors—to magistrates who were nearly all Protestants and landlords—the very class whose tyranny was the subject of complaint. Whatever might be said as to the necessity of such a measure, it was at least one which would be grievously oppressive, and would cause an intensification of hardship. It was one, moreover, which as those who knew Ireland best assured us, would be the occasion of grievous evils, which all so bitterly deplored, and which the Catholic Church most strongly condemned (hear, hear). If open agitation were forbidden and suppressed there would be a great temptation to secret plotting against public law and order, and, in the hope of constitutional means being taken away, the devil would tempt men to redress their wrongs by the commission of crime. When, then, the English Government was about to deliberate on a measure so grievous and so dangerous, it was well, at least, that men, while the true state of the case should be everywhere made known to the people of England that they might not be misled by the panic cries of interested persons. He, therefore, especially rejoiced that they in Nottingham had now the opportunity of hearing so able an advocate of the Irish cause as the hon. member for Mayo (loud applause), who had everywhere acquired for himself a reputation for eloquence of the first order, as well as for zeal in the service of his country (loud applause).

READ THIS TWICE.—Five to thirty drops of Thomas' Electric Oil will cure Sore Throat. It never fails in Croup. It will cure a cough or cold in twenty-four to forty-eight hours. One bottle has cured Bronchitis of eight years standing; recent cases are cured in three to six days. It has restored the lungs where the person had not spoken above a whisper in five years. As an outward application in all cases of pain or lameness, nothing like it has ever been known. One bottle will cure any case of lame Back or Crick in the Back. For diseases of the Spine and Contracture of the Muscles it is unequalled. In Rheumatism or any other pain the first application does you good. It stops Earache and the pain of a burn in three minutes, and is altogether the cheapest medicine ever offered to the people—the cheapest, because it uses so little to do you good. It is composed of six of the best oils known, and nothing but oils. Its worth its weight in gold. Why not buy it to-day?—A. B. Des Roches, assistant postmaster, Arthalaskayville, P. Q., writes: "Thirteen years ago I was seized by a severe attack of Rheumatism in the head, from which I have nearly constantly suffered. After having used Thomas' Electric Oil for nine days, bathing the forehead, I have been completely cured, and have only used half a bottle. This I can certify under oath if you wish."—Rev. J. Mulrory, of Wyoming, N. Y., writes: "I have used Thomas' Electric Oil for Rheumatism in one week."

Beware of Imitations.—Ask for Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. See that the signature of S. N. Thomas is on the wrapper.

per, and the names of Northrop & Lyman are blown on the bottle, and Taken other. Sold by all medicine dealers. NORTHROP & LYMAN, Toronto, Ont., Proprietors for the Dominion.

Headache. Why become a suffering martyr to Headache, when BURBROCK BLOOD BITTERS will surely cure the cause of all varieties of either Sick or Nervous Headache, cleanse the system, regulate the Secretions, relieve Constipation of the Bowels, purify the Blood, renovate the Liver and tone up the Nervous System, and distressing headache will be unknown? Sample Bottles 10 cents, Large Bottles $1.00.

Workmen. Before you begin your heavy spring work after a winter of relaxation, your system needs cleansing and strengthening to prevent an attack of Ague, Bilious or Spring Fever, or some other Spring sickness that will unfit you for a season's work. You will save time, much sickness and great expense if you use one bottle of Hop Bitters in your family this month. Don't wait.—Burlington Hawkeye.

HAYWARD'S PECTORAL BALM is composed of the most healing balsams and gums. The Balsams, which enter into its composition, were used by the natives when America was first discovered and are combined with other valuable tonics, so blended together, that it is specific for all affections of the throat and lungs. Thousands of bottles are used annually, and it is considered one of the standard preparations of the day.

No remedy in the world ever came into such universal use, or has so fully won the confidence of mankind, as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for the cure of Coughs, Colds and Consumption.

Though the soil of Virginia grows the best tobacco leaf in the world, it does not all grow equal qualities. The production even of adjoining counties is often quite different, the one producing leaf which at once deteriorates if grown in the soil of the leaf of the "Myrtle Navy" is the product of the choice sections of the State, which, through some combination of local influences, produce a better quality than any others. This is shown by its always commanding a higher price than any other smoking leaf.

Haggard's Pectoral Balsam: a few doses relieves the most distressing cough, and a twenty-five cent bottle has cured many a sufferer from Asthma, Bronchitis, Croup, Influenza, Hoarseness, Soreness of the Chest. It is the grand specific for all throat and lung complaints leading to Consumption.

That marvelous purifier, BURBROCK BLOOD BITTERS, will speedily change the sallow face to one of freshness, health and beauty. It regulates the Bowels, acts promptly on the Liver and Kidneys and strengthens the system when broken down by Nervous or General Debility. Ask your Druggist for a Trial Bottle, the cost is only 10 cents, Large Bottles $1.00.
