Catholic Record. The

" Christianus mihi nomen est my Name but Catholic my Surname.)-St. Paclan, 4th Century.

VOLUME XXX.

LONDON, ONTARIO SATURDAY, JANUARY 25 1908

The Catholic Record LONDON, SATURDAY, JAN. 25, 1908.

HOW HE VIEWS IT.

Writing in the Illustrated London News, Mr. G. K. Chesterton says : " All reasonable men believe in symbol ; but some reasonable men do not believe in ritualism : by which they mean, I imagine, a symbolism too com plex, elaborate and mechanical. But whenever they talk of ritualism, they seem to mean the ritualism of the Church. Why should they not mean

The ritual of a dinner party is much more ritualistic. Priests may put gold and great jewels in the chalice, but at least there is only one chalice to put them on. When you go to a dinner party they put in front of you five different chalices, of five weird and her-

AN ANGLICAN VOICE.

ible sign of the desires of his heart,

The Lamp, an Anglo Roman monthly,

of God, results of far reaching consequence have grown from that gener-

kinds of wines."

a NTEREST ccounts more

1908.

da

L.P.

.

150

anager.

anager.

1854

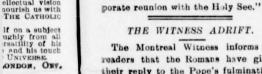

ANK

Toronto 1 7 to 9 athurst St. thurst St.

Station, Ville. g Man. New York. d. London, Eng

IASON. al Manager T ONCE on sal T ONCE on sal-ry and expenses, n each locality ble of handling e our guaranteed No experience t for you. $25 s trmanent. Write Co., London, One will follow his example and send a Christmas gift of Peter's Pence to the Lev. Alex. Pope in honor of his sacerdotal jubilee. V. G. It should contain a short personal me sage to the Holy Father, letting I..... 75 II..... 75 ill exercise the ellectual vision nourish us with THE CATHOLIC him know that the giver is an Anglican Churchman whose heart's desire is cor-

The Montreal Witness informs its readers that the Romans have given their reply to the Pope's fulminations against Modernism by electing as Mayor a Jew, Ernest Nathan. Now Nathan is not an Italian at all, and is half English and half Jew. He is a rabid anti-clerical, and Honorary

Grand Master of Italian freemasonry.

Furthermore, out of 42,000 electors

but 17,000, and these avowed enemies of the Vatican, appeared at the polls.

Hence their victory was not an answer to anything but a manifestation of the spirit that is opposed to religion. The editor may attribute it to the Pope's utterances because the one came after

Annua )8

tiful Illustrations

Y - 25th Year

Colors and a trations NTS

cles of the Best culations-Cal-s-A House-g for the 8 ISSUE

7. the Father By HON. Mau-Illustrated. ACE KEON. A the Life of the paper."

the ritual of the world? It is much more ritualistic. The ritual of one of the most favorable to democracy. the army, the ritual of the navy, the Proudhon has no doubt about it. ritual of the law courts, the ritual of Others declare that the Church alone Parliament are much more ritualistic.

lespotism. GOOD ADVICE.

In the course of an article on books, Mr. G. Chesterton says that everyone ought to know Newman's Apologia, not aldic shapes, to symbolize five different specially the subtle history of his early hesitations, but most emphatically the fine and firm conclusion of the book in which he sets out his fundamental reasons for being a Catholic. Nothing Commenting on the statement of ever written on behalf of Christianity Rev. Arthur Lloyd, of Japan, that he is stronger than that celebrated pass has taken to the periodical payment of age in which he contrasts the presence Peter's Pence as an outward and visof God in the heart with His seeming absence in nature, saying that it appals him as if he had looked into a mirror says that "already, under the blessings and not seen his own face. The whole notion of a conflict between science and religion is futile ; it can only arise ous initiative. Who among our readers out of an unscientific deduction of science or else an irreligious definition any other institution of the land. of religion.

Science, he says, is dangerous, not because it encourages doubt, but, on the contrary, because, when thus popularly presented, it encourages a universal credulity. Merely new books tend to narrow us. We require old books to broaden us ; we require orthodox books to bewilder us again. He tells us that a man ought to know at least the Confessions of St. Augustine, some part (the theistic part) of St. Thomas Aquinas (this is harder to get. but there is a good English abridgment, published recently) and he ought to know the philosophy of Descartes. Many of us, however, prefer the popular magazine with its chit-chat about the stage, storvettes, and scraps of in formation. A good book, one that demands attention, would discipline the mind, but these articles about nothing in particular debauch it, and render it incapable of application and effort.

A VERY OLD STORY.

the other, but people who are not edit-His Lordship, the Bishop of London, ors have some regard for the most whose doings and sayings were recorded ordinary rules of logic. One of the so minutely by the press, has given us members of the new Roman City Counand it is no longer even the will, but the mandate of the people that is spoken his impressions of his visit to America. cil is the editor of the Asino, " that Whatsoever may be thought of them notoriously blasphemous and obscene they are indicative of wide sympathy, t'e responsibility for the laws and and are, so far as gracious urbanity government of the country. To day of. Thus we have all come to share goes, beyond reproach. But to our the masses play-or are supposed to play, and may actually play-an im portant part in the public administramind he agrees with Mr. Froude that history is a " child's book of letters." For instance, he tells the readers of the Cosmopolitan that "I found in upto date America a little ignorance about ancient Church history. Some of them imagined that the Church of England began with Henry VIII." We are of the opinion that this question has been removed from the domain of imagination by historians. They agree that the infatuation of King Henry VIII. for Anne Bolevn was the direct cause of his challenge to the supremacy of the Pope. "A king," says Mac-same century saw the birth of the England to-day to the Holy Father ? characteristic feature of modern so Before Henry VIII. the Church in Engciety-the control of political power land was one : to day the Church of Engby representative assemblies." (Mean land is a camping ground for hopelessly ing of Hi-tory. Frederic Harrison.) irreconcilable opinions. Before Henry All that is best about Canada we VII. the Church in England held that have inherited from our forbears in the her authority to teach and to govern faith. But why should the Pope seek came from Christ and His Apostles : to crush democracy? The Witness the Church of Eagland is, to quote Lord seems to think that it bodes danger to Caref Justice Coleridge, " a political the Church. While waiting for his institution, established, created and reasons we may point out that some of protected by law, absolutely dependent the most brilliant minds are not so on Parliament." The Bishop of London sure as is the editor on this point. has just so much jurisdiction as a Prime M. de Tocqueville believes that among minister can give him. "The position the different doctrines Catholicism is of Bishops in the Church of England has been from the first anomalous. He says that no national object was secured by the transparent fiction of the can regulate democracy, that is, preelection and consecration. The invent it from becoming as unbridled vocation of the Holy Spirit either meant nothing, and was a taking of sacred names in vain, or it implied that the Third Person of the Trinity was, as a matter of ourse, to register the already declared decision of the English sovereign. The wisest and best of its bishops have found their inflaence impaired by the element of unreality that adheres to them "-(Froudes History of England, Vol. zii, pp. 557-558 ) And Dr. Elliot. Dean of Bristol, in his sermons on some of the subjects of the day, p. 11, avers that the clergy of the Church of England are but ministers and stewards, not lords and masters in a Church, which so far as it is the English Church because established by the English nation, is created by the law, upheld by the law, paid by the law, and may be changed by the law just as

A PRIMARY CIVIC DUTY.

The Irish Ecclesiastical Record. It is not a little surprising how spar-agly our ordinary texts books of Moral Theology deal with the virtue of legal justice. They admit or at least clear-ly imply its importance, for they invariably raise the question whether every sin is a violation of legal justice, as well as of the particular virtue to which it is immediately opposed. Farther than this, however, they rare

The explanation of such a method of treatment seems to me to be found in the social conditions that prevailed when the classics of Theology were written. The practical obligations arising from legal justice could, at that time, be very easily described in general terms. The rulers were simply bound to enact equitable laws and the subjects to observe these laws in a proper spirit. These principles, specific enough for the age in which they were written, were merely repeated by later theologians, when social relations had lost much of their ancient simpli city. It is a long cry from the veritable monarchical governments of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries to the democratic spirit that obtains in European countries to day. The voice of the people has now to be listened to; middle class. The latter half of this Is this the attitude of the Church of are corrupt, sunken too low a level to claim the serious attention of honest, intelligent men, is simply an excuse or the arrogance that makes these people regard themselves as so much superior to their fellows, or for the aziness and cowardice that prevent so many from taking their proper place in the community—the place their talents and social standing require of them. There is no reason, surely in the nature of things, may politice where the same things, why politics should be cor ropt, or politicians dishonest. Poli-tics will be precisely what politicians make them; and politicians, in turn, will be the class of men that obtain the confidence of the public with whom heir words have weight. Of course their words have words, and unselfish according as thoughtful and unselfish men hold sloof, political influence gets into the hands of worthless, self seek o the hands of worthless, self seek demagogues. Naturally we should xpect trusted politicians to be the rex of the people that trust them. appear impossible that immoral or atheistic politicians should flourish moral, Christian communities ; if ney do, we may be sure it is because something has gone wrong, beca some have failed to do their duty. because On this point I shall have occasion to speak at greater length in another con-Man is by nature a social being. He m y not, even if he could, live a solitary unit, not affected by nor affect-ing others. He might, indeed, if left b himself, manage to subsist; possibly, e might attain to the knowledge of a w elementary truths, and realize a few principles of morality; but he could not develop, as he ought, and perfect the faculties of mind and body that have been bestowed on him. It is only in community that he can lead the life his Creator intended him to lead even in this world. Hence society is necessary for us all. It is the ele ment in which the seeds of human in-telligence-so feeble and so little suffi cient for themselves that some have really doubted whether they would exist at all in a state of complete solitude-develop and are perfected until they reach their consummation in the most perfect citizen of the most perfect state. As to how far that perfect state or perfect citizen will ever be r-alized, we may all very well have our own opinions. At least it is certain that community life makes for the realization of such an ideal, and will be successful to the extent to which the mutual relations of its members are wisely determined and conscienti ously observed.

As members, then, of society - that, in some form, is absolutely necessary for us, and that, if perfectly consti-tuted, might elevate our lives into an altogether different sphere-we are all bound to aim at that society's perfect ion ; to foster whatever makes for its improvement as well as to prevent any thing that should tend to injure it injure lit And this is the object of legal justice ; for legal justice is the virtue that in-clines the individual of a community to promote the common good. Now the most important element in the constitution of community life is its authority; since community life, of any kind worthy of the name, is impossible without authority ; and since, moreover, it is by the nature of its authority, the manner in which that authority is exer cised, and the respect shown to it, that a society's success or failure will ever be measured. And herein we find the justification of theologians, in deter-mining the obligations arising from from egal justice for the ruler to consist in the equitable enactment and adminis-tration of laws, and for the subject in hmission te antho

This responsibility does not imply is quite intelligible that there should be that every individual of the ruling grounds for complaint from time to body should be condemned for every time. Even the most carefully selected mistake or fault of government, as if he had entire control. It implies merely that each is guilty, as far as he has onduced positively towards the evil by actually conducing to have the vicious measure carried, or negatively by remaining passive, when he might reasonably be expected to oppose it. Every individual of this governing class would be clearly bound to make some effort to understand public ques tions and everything that might have an important bearing on them. How much, in particular cases, this duty would embrace would depend on a variety of circumstances, principally on the intelligence, social position and opportunities of the individual con erned.

Finally, when the governing power s extended still farther, even so far as to be shared in by every member of the community, it still carries its concomitant obligations.

Taking it then, as certain, that citizens are morally bound to endeavour to promote the good government of the state, whenever, and so far as, the means of doing so are placed in their hands, I think there can be no doubt about the general principle of our practical obligations and responsibility in this respect. Every person entitled to a vote is, by that very fact, bound to use it for the benefit of the entire community. And even more, by it he becomes responsible for the official acts of the legislative and administrative bodies, that he and others like him have selected to act in their name. The practical government of the country at present is carried on by elective bodies. Without raising the question of the origin of the authority by which elected legislators act, there can be no doubt about the one pertinent fact, that, in its exercise, it is dependent on the people. All that Members of Parliament do officially, whether directly or indirectly, is done in the name of the people that select them. Local affairs, too, are administered by elected representatives of the people, by alder-men, councillors, guardians and similar bodies; the people, accordingly, are responsible for the manner in which these offices are discharged. these offices are discharged.

If, therefore, Members of Parliament are guilty of unjust legislation, or if they make unfair appointments to government boards, the whole thing is done in the name of the people whom they represent. It is the public, it is every one of us that have votes, that have placed them in that position, to act in our name. Their injustice, act in our name. Their injustice, their corruption, is truly the injustice and corruption of the community. If a sovereign were to appoint a coartier to carry on the government of his state without inquiring into his qualifications for such a position, beyond noticing that he was affable and high spirited, should we not justly say that all the blunders such a deputy fell into, and all the crimes he committed in the exercise of his office, were to be attributed to the sovereign ? So, likewise, if people are content to be guided in their selection of parliamentary representatives, merely be cause a certain candi ate is eloquent, r popular, or because he makes fair promises, must not they be adjudged guilty of the crimes he commits in his representative capacity? And not only the public generally, but every individual of it in particular, is guilty of the crimes of its official representatives, according to the nature of the responsibilit I have already explained, .e., according as each has conduced posi tively to have unworthy or dishonest representatives selected, or failed to make a reasonable effort to prevent it.

grounds for complaint from time to time. Even the most carefully selected entatives will sometimes prove unworthy of the trust reposed in them. Bat there is, in the nature of things, no reason for the prevalence of these complaints, no explanation of the chronic dissatisfaction of the people with their representatives. The retort seems evident : It is the people them seems evident; to is the populatives selves that select their representatives if, therefore, they are unsatisfactory, why select them ? Does it not sound almost paradoxical that the public freely, with their eyes open, depute men to act in their name, and if the complaints we hear be justifiable, to mismanage their affairs, so ietimes even to cheat and rob them. In sober earnest, if there are robberies committed in these matters at all, the neople robbing themse ves through presentatives. And a particularly sad feature of the case, as far as the people are concerned, and that which is most responsible for most of the complaints, is that, while they are robbed truly enough, they never receive the spolls. which are manipulated by the repre-sentatives in their private capacity. TO BE CONTINUED.

SAINT BLASIUS.

The Festival of this saint is kept on Febrary 3. He was Bishop of Sebaste, in Armenia, and suffered martyrdom for his faith in the year 316. Many wonderful cures were performed through his intercession, and on that account he is particularly bonored and invoked by the sick.

Amongst the remarkable cures wrought by his prayers was that of a boy, who was nearly choked to death by a fish bone sticking in his throat, from which the saint freed him. Hence came the practice observed in many places, and approved by the Church, of the blessing of throats on this day.

At the end of Mass the priest first blesses two candles, using a form of prayer approved for this purpose, and found in the Roman ritual. Then the people come forward and kneel at the Communion rail, and the priest holds the candles crossed on their necks, praying at the same time in Latin :

"Through the intercession of Saint Infour the interestion of Saint Blasias, B shop and martyr, may the Lord free thee from sore throat and from every other evil. In the name of

I know of some parishes in this country where this devotion to Saint Blasius has become very popular amongst persons that do not belong to the Catholic Church, as well as amongst Catho-lics. In one of these towns in parti-cular, the priest has so many to bless that for some years past he tries on this day to get two or three priests to help him on Saint Blasius's day. Be-ginning immediately a ter Mass, he used to continue blessing throats till 12 o'clock and after; eating his dinner. he returned again, and was kept busy at blessing throats till 3 or 4 o clock in the afternoon.

And why do even Protestants and others continue to come on that day to the Catholic Church to have their throats blessed, and bring their chil-dren? Because for many years it had been noticed that when diphtheria. croup, or other maladies of the throat broke out, those families escaped whose throats had been blesse i on the feast of Saint Blasius : or, if any of them happened to have the disease, it was or

1527

ng. By MAUD 1. By MARY F AMES TAGGART. ntennial. By Pictures of our ME HARTE. Isle. By P. G. y E. M. POWER, er Marquette, With 9 illustra-. By MARY E. sa. With illus-

SHIELA MAHON. Past Year.

Annual for the Young. py Record ADA

. 4, London, ursday of every hall, in Albion L. J. McGrath ary.

oks. Benson. TH - Being unprofession t bound in solid e side and back 11.35 delivered. -A most amus-12mo. bound in of Father Benmater-of-fact efore the altar: I and of prem look at him and very well under-o over'; if you id it in a flasn." DON.CANADA says a correspondent of the Saturday Review, " which is simply a disgrace to journalism and to Italy." The editor, it seems to us, is at no pains to conceal his joy at the situation in Rome. Perchance the gentleman who writes dispassionately on other topics did not pen the article which has astonished us. One can dislike Rome without trampling on the canons of social amenity. And one can critize the Holy Father without forgetting the rules of fair-play. But how any reasonable individual can view other than with abhorrence the anti clerical whose weapons are calumny and obscenity

AN INSINUATION.

passes our comprehension.

described by saying that he was des-When the editor insinuates that the potism itself personded, unprincipled Holy Father is seeking to crush deministers, a rapacious aristocracy, a serv le Parliament-such were the inmocracy we remember the dictum of knowing things that "aint so." Not struments by which England was debeing a mind reader we take the Holy livered from the yoke of Rome."

Father's instructions as they come. " It may be disagreeable," says Dr. and we confess that the eye of the James Gairdner, " to trace the Reformation to such a very ignoble origin : editor has discerned far more in them than we have discovered We know but facts, as the Scottish poet says, are that the Holy See has declared that fellows that you cant coerce, and that wont bear to be disputed." This effect the Church is indifferent to all forms of was to make the Church of England government. She has seen them pass and repass on her journey adown the a national Church, recognizing as its ages. All this is accidental so far as head the English king. Aylmer, Bishop of London in the time of Elizabeth, has she is concerned.

no imagination on the question of the With regard to civil liberty let us source of the Church of England. glance at the thirteenth century, one "Was not," he says, "Queen Anne the of the most memorable most organic in the anoals of mankind, and one in chief, first, and only cause of banishing which the Church exercised wast in- | the beast of Rome with all his beggarly baggage." It seems to be certain that fluen e in civil matters. "For Northern Europe the thirteenth century is the if Anne Boleyn had been as unattracera of the definite establishment of tive in the eyes of Henry VIII. as Anne rich free self governing municipalities. of Cleves, the English Reformation It is the flouri-hing era of town charmight never have taken place.

tors, of city leagues. And out of those In pre-Reformation days the Church tich cities arose that social power, the in England was obedient to the Pope.

tion. Still many appear not to realize their influence, or their obligation to use that influence to some purpose. The lower classes of wa not yet come to exercise that power in public matters that their numbers might seem to entitle them to. As a rule, they are too ignorant to take an intelligent interest in public questions at all, or too poor to concern them selves about anything, beyond what will minister to the immediate wants of themselves and their families. But their season of power will come ; al ready it is beginning to appear, accord ing as one or other of the great politi cal parties finds it to its advantage to aulay. " whose character may ne best remind them of it. Not quite so intelligible nor excus able is able is the position of educated men who profess to hold themselves aloo from public interests, and live practi cally, as if they were under a sixteenth century despotism, simply trying to make the best of what others - the others government-will do for them, as it the government were something al-together removed from themselvessomething which they could not hope to influence. Politics of all kinds — national and municipal — they ostenta tiously hold in abhorrence. Politi-cians, they will tell you, are a venal and corrupt tribe, with which they could not mix without defiling their fair fame. They are fully satisfied that no one will have anything to do with politics that has not some are to grind-some stroke of business to effect for himself or his friends. And se drawing their double mantle of probity and respectability tightly around them they protect themselves from the con-taminating influence of vulgar politics. Others again are too indifferent to affairs of public interest to take active part in them. Without actually revil ing politics or politicians, they are well content to let others see to them, and d-vote their entire attention to private business or domestic concerns. Now there is no excuse for the two obedience to just laws. With the subject's obligations we are not now consubject so fugations we are not now con-corned; the ruler's, strange as it may appear, have a practical bearing for us all, which it may be worth while considering at greater length.

It the entire government of a nation ere vested simply in one individual if, for instance, an absolute monarch had complete control of the laws, if he were iree to make what laws he would and able to determine the manner in which these laws should be adminis-tered, would it not be his obvious duty to provide that that nation should be equitably governed? Would he not be bound to study the needs of the people, to seek out abuses, and to provide remedies as far as he could? And all this were to much for him, ould he not be bound to associate with himself prudent advisers and able sistants ? If, instead of being vested olely in one, the supreme sovereign were shared by a dozen heredi owe ary rulers, the only difference would that the obligations, in the first in stance confined to one, would row be extended to twelve. Each would be bound to do his own share to sedure good equitable government,

Similarly, if instead of a definite hereditary rulers, a particu umber o lar section of the community. e. g landed proprietors, lawyers, or men dowed with supreme raling authority every individual of that class would be responsible for the government. Th ruling section of the community might too large to admit of all taking an active part in the actual government and an agreement might be entered into by virtue of which the authority would be exercised by a select few, in the name of the whole class. Even in such a case, the others would not be entirely freed from responsibility. The government would be still carried on entirely freed from respective government would be still carried on in their name, and its enactments would be morally regarded as the acts of the entire body, i. e. unless they validly renounced all right both to participate in the government them-selves and to have any voice in the latter classes. The plea that politics selection of their representatives.

that is not the true ligh , many of us that have been accustomed to pride ourselves, on our indifference to pol itical questions, and from our lofty pin nacle to look down with contempt on the vulgar squabbles of politicians, and with horror on their dishonesty, may begin to feel disquieting doubts about the nobility of the part we have been taking-may, in fact, see reasons for turning our condemnation of politi-cians back upon ourselves. For, sure ly, if anyone is ever guilty of culpable negligence in this matter, it is these revilers of politicians who, with nothing better than a word of loraly in d ff rence, or hopeless criticism, look on passively when candidates whom they profess to believe unworthy of confidence seek election and win. And if all this is true of our obliga tion, in what may be called national politics, and of our responsibility for the laws passed by our parliament-ary representatives, as well as for the working of all administrative boards subject to them, equally true, and much more evident, is it of our obliga tions in municipal politics, and of our responsibility for the acts of our representatives on local boards, boards of guardians, county councils, etc. We constantly hear complaints of the manner in which the affairs of these boards are administered. Members are often said to be more influenced by considerations for the interests of themselves and their friends than for those of the public whom they represent. And n t unfrequently do we hear suggestions of even grosser practices of corrup ion I do not mean to imply that public boards in Ireland are worse, in this re-spect, than similar bodies in other countries. On the contrary, as far as as it is possible to compare them at all, they appear better and purer But taking into account the method in which the members of these boards are selected, it would be too much to screet from human nature that sources listers state stipends, and should not prevail here as elsewhere. It Jewish rabbis the same."

Viewed in this light, and I cannot se

in a light form .-- Catholic Messenger

CATHOLIC NOTES.

Official notice was received from Rome last Saturday by Bishop Hortsmann that Rev. Joseph M. Koudelka had peen appointed to the position of Anriliary Bishop of the Cleveland diocese.

Two young Levites, Rov. Ferdinand Angel and Rev. John C. 1 of Pittsburg, celebrated their Angel first Masses on Christmas Day in St. Joseph's Church, Bloomfield. About eight hundred men, members of the Foresters, C. M. B. A., Knights of St. George and par sh societies, attended both Masses in a body.

A dispatch from Washington, D. C., dated Jan 6, says: As a mark of the high respect in which Dr. Stafford was held by others than Catholics, Rev. Frank M. Bristol, pastor of the Metro-Frank M. Bristol, pastor of the Metro-politan Methodist Episcopal Church, has directed that the chimes be tolled during the services on Taesday. Dar-ing the funeral march to Mount Olivet Cemetery the chimes will play " Nearer, My God, to Tnee," and " Lead Kindly Light.

The staff physicians of St. Mary's Hospital. Milwaukee, acted as pall-bearers at the funeral of Sister Theresa, who was shot by a discharged patient, supposed to be insane. The Most Rev. Arcabishop Messmer was present at the Solemn High Mass of Requiem, and addressed a tew words of consolation to the Sisters on the untimely taking of their beloved companion.

"Belgium," says the Glasgow Observer "is a Catholic country-the only country in Christendom with an expressly Catholic Ministry in power for the past twenty years, the only coun-try where Catholics as a party have had and have the upper hand. Belgium is the most prosperous country in the world. The Belgian state pays the Oatholic priests a state salary. The B-lgian state goes further. Catholic state that it is, it pays Protestant ministers state stipends, and it pays even