

Dr. Pitcher Helps An Old Man

The Kidney Weakness, Irritability and Frequent Rising at Night, all Cured by Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets.

People advanced in years are so prone to kidney trouble. The filters of the body become clogged up and out of order after years of incessant work keeping the blood pure.

There is too frequent urination, disturbance of the rest at night, pain or stinging, weakness of the bladder, non-retention of the urine, and severe pain in the back, making sleeping or rising a painful operation.

For these conditions there is no remedy so effective as Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets.

They make old people rejoice in renewed strength and vigor of the whole urinary system, take the pain and stiffness out of the back and permit undisturbed rest at night.

Mr. Joseph Rippon, 593 Dundas St., Woodstock, Ont., who has been in the book and stationery business for over thirty-five years, says:

"With people reaching my age, sixty-seven years, more or less backache and kidney trouble is not uncommon.
For over a year I have had more or less trouble and irritation in that dissection, which I lay to the long hours on my feet of years past. Wishing to put an end to a trouble that was growing progressively worse, I prepared a bottle of Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets, and am pleased to say they are satisfactory in every respect. I did not quite finish the one bottle I got, and all pain and irritation are completely gone. I am pleased to recommend them to others."

Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets are 50 cents a bottle or three bottles for $1.25 at all druggists, or sent by mail on receipt of price. The Dr. Zina Pitcher Co., Toronto, Ont.

"Oh, he will do. And he looks the gentleman."

"Oh, quite. And he arrives oppor-tunately. I have news of the—"

"What? Do they arrive in Paris sooner than arranged?"

"They are on the way, and unless they delay on the road they will reach Paris tomorrow. It was given out that they would arrive on Saturday, four days from now."

"Yes, Ah, these aristocrats! What will they not do to circumvent justice?"

This speech reached the quick ears of Wallace. He listened more intently.

"Had they arrived Saturday it would have given us time to have our preparations complete. But if they come tomorrow it shows they suspect, and our case will be difficult. Yet with such a man I could almost swear on success."

"Oh, my cath, if you want it, this man will succeed. Did I not tell you he was about to commit suicide?"

"So much the better. And another thing. The prince has his sister with him, that detestable piece of haughtiness, Marie Alexia."

"Marie, princess of—"

"Hush, you fool! You speak as if you wished to tell your secrets to the people on the next street. Have discretion. Yes, she is with the party."

"Looking for a husband?"

"With that we have nothing to do.
Our business is with—"

"Yes, yes, I know. And the Princess Margaret?"

"Is with her husband, of course, and their physician; also, I believe, 12 attendants in all."

"Not many, though enough. Well," as Jacques returned, "old sleephead, what have you discovered—an entire floor empty?"

"Not a room. Not a bed. Well?"

"Come, Jacques, take the man to my own room," said the last comer. "I shall be here an hour or two with my brother."

"Come on, then," said Jacques, with a growl.

"Follow him," said the wolf. "Make yourself at home. My room and bed are at your service. I have slept enough."

Wallace knew that he had been led into the headquarters of a band of murderous conspirators. He knew from the scraps of conversation that had come to him that a great crime was being planned. He knew also that these cowardly plotters hoped to fix upon him the most dangerous part of the plot because he was supposed to be weary enough of life to commit self destruction.

His first impulse was to dash through the door and make good his escape while he might. A second and more chivalrous one was to remain and defeat the plot if it proved to be as dangerous as he suspected.

He did not know who was meant by the Princess Margaret or Marie Alexia.
It was certain, however, that a family of great personages was expected in Paris, and a plot to destroy them was on foot.

Wallace was an American. He had no sympathy with the lawless and violent elements of society in Europe or at home. He was brave. He loved, as I said before, adventure.

"I thank you," he said coolly as he rose from his chair and followed Jacques.

He climbed a flight of stairs lighted by a foul odored lamp. He was ushered into a large room containing a

THE STRANGER AND THE PRINCESS

BY SEWARD W. HOPKINS

Copyright, 1900, by Seward W. Hopkins.

"Of, very well, since you know him," interrupted the other. "Let him go somewhere. I want to speak to you on a matter of great importance."

"As to that, I have hustled old Jacques off to find a place for him to sleep. He is in despair. I found him on the bridge contemplating the water.
I recalled our need of men who have good appearance and no fear of death.
I brought him to you. Do with him what you can."

"Good! He looks like a brave fellow," said the wolf, glancing with sharp scrutiny at Wallace. Buckford could catch but a portion of the conversation.

"Oh, he will do. And he looks the gentleman."

"Oh, quite. And he arrives oppor-tunately. I have news of the—"

"What? Do they arrive in Paris sooner than arranged?"

"They are on the way, and unless
they delay on the road they will reach Paris tomorrow. It was given out that they would arrive on Saturday, four
days from now."

"Yes, Ah, these aristocrats! What will they not do to circumvent justice?"

This speech reached the quick ears of Wallace. He listened more intently.

"Had they arrived Saturday it would have given us time to have our preparations complete. But if they come tomorrow it shows they suspect, and our case will be difficult. Yet with such a man I could almost swear on success."

"Oh, my cath, if you want it, this man will succeed. Did I not tell you
he was about to commit suicide?"

"So much the better. And another thing. The prince has his sister with him, that detestable piece of haughti-
ness, Marie Alexia."

"Marie, princess of—"

"Hush, you fool! You speak as if you wished to tell your secrets to the people on the next street. Have discretion. Yes, she is with the party."

"Looking for a husband?"

"With that we have nothing to do.
Our business is with—"

"Yes, yes, I know. And the Princess Margaret?"

"Is with her husband, of course, and their physician; also, I believe, 12 attendants in all."

"Not many, though enough. Well," as Jacques returned, "old sleephead, what have you discovered—an entire
floor empty?"

"Not a room. Not a bed. Well?"

"Come, Jacques, take the man to my own room," said the last comer. "I shall be here an hour or two with my brother."

"Come on, then," said Jacques, with a growl.

"Follow him," said the wolf. "Make yourself at home. My room and bed
are at your service. I have slept
enough."

Wallace knew that he had been led
into the headquarters of a band of murderous conspirators. He knew from
the scraps of conversation that had come to him that a great crime was being planned. He knew also that these cowardly plotters hoped to fix
upon him the most dangerous part of the plot because he was supposed to be weary enough of life to commit self destruction.

His first impulse was to dash through
the door and make good his escape while he might. A second and more chivalrous one was to remain and defeat the plot if it proved to be as dangerous as he suspected.

He did not know who was meant by the Princess Margaret or Marie Alexia.
It was certain, however, that a family of great personages was expected in Paris, and a plot to destroy them was
on foot.

Wallace was an American. He had no sympathy with the lawless and violent elements of society in Europe or
at home. He was brave. He loved, as I said before, adventure.

"I thank you," he said coolly as he
rose from his chair and followed Jacques.

He climbed a flight of stairs lighted
by a foul odored lamp. He was ushered
into a large room containing a

"Of, very well, since you know him,"
interrupted the other. "Let him go somewhere. I want to speak to you
on a matter of great importance."

"As to that, I have hustled old Jacques off to find a place for him to sleep. He is in despair. I found him on the bridge contemplating the water.
I recalled our need of men who have
good appearance and no fear of death.
I brought him to you. Do with him
what you can."

"Good! He looks like a brave fellow," said the wolf, glancing with sharp scrutiny at Wallace. Buckford could catch but a portion of the conversation.

"Oh, he will do. And he looks the gentleman."

"Oh, quite. And he arrives oppor-tunately. I have news of the—"

"What? Do they arrive in Paris sooner than arranged?"

"They are on the way, and unless
they delay on the road they will reach Paris tomorrow. It was given out that they would arrive on Saturday, four
days from now."

"Of, very well, since you know him," interrupted the other. "Let him go somewhere. I want to speak to you
on a matter of great importance."

"As to that, I have hustled old Jacques off to find a place for him to sleep. He is in despair. I found him on the bridge contemplating the water.
I recalled our need of men who have
good appearance and no fear of death.
I brought him to you. Do with him
what you can."

"Good! He looks like a brave fellow," said the wolf, glancing with sharp scrutiny at Wallace. Buckford could catch but a portion of the conversation.

"Oh, he will do. And he looks the gentleman."

"Oh, quite. And he arrives oppor-tunately. I have news of the—"

"What? Do they arrive in Paris sooner than arranged?"

"They are on the way, and unless
they delay on the road they will reach Paris tomorrow. It was given out that they would arrive on Saturday, four
days from now."

"Yes, Ah, these aristocrats! What will they not do to circumvent justice?"

This speech reached the quick ears of Wallace. He listened more intently.

"Had they arrived Saturday it would have given us time to have our preparations complete. But if they come tomorrow it shows they suspect, and our case will be difficult. Yet with such a man I could almost swear on success."

"Oh, my cath, if you want it, this man will succeed. Did I not tell you
he was about to commit suicide?"

"So much the better. And another thing. The prince has his sister with him, that detestable piece of haughti-
ness, Marie Alexia."

"Marie, princess of—"

"Hush, you fool! You speak as if you wished to tell your secrets to the people on the next street. Have discretion. Yes, she is with the party."

"Looking for a husband?"

"With that we have nothing to do.
Our business is with—"

"Yes, yes, I know. And the Princess Margaret?"

"Is with her husband, of course, and their physician; also, I believe, 12 attendants in all."

"Not many, though enough. Well," as Jacques returned, "old sleephead, what have you discovered—an entire
floor empty?"

"Not a room. Not a bed. Well?"

"Come, Jacques, take the man to my own room," said the last comer. "I shall be here an hour or two with my brother."

"Come on, then," said Jacques, with a growl.

"Follow him," said the wolf. "Make yourself at home. My room and bed
are at your service. I have slept
enough."

Wallace knew that he had been led
into the headquarters of a band of murderous conspirators. He knew from
the scraps of conversation that had come to him that a great crime was being planned. He knew also that these cowardly plotters hoped to fix
upon him the most dangerous part of the plot because he was supposed to be weary enough of life to commit self destruction.

His first impulse was to dash through
the door and make good his escape while he might. A second and more chivalrous one was to remain and defeat the plot if it proved to be as dangerous as he suspected.

He did not know who was meant by the Princess Margaret or Marie Alexia.
It was certain, however, that a family of great personages was expected in Paris, and a plot to destroy them was
on foot.

Wallace was an American. He had no sympathy with the lawless and violent elements of society in Europe or at home. He was brave. He loved, as I said before, adventure.

"I thank you," he said coolly as he
rose from his chair and followed Jacques.

He climbed a flight of stairs lighted
by a foul odored lamp. He was ushered
into a large room containing a

"Of, very well, since you know him,"
interrupted the other. "Let him go somewhere. I want to speak to you
on a matter of great importance."

"As to that, I have hustled old Jacques off to find a place for him to sleep. He is in despair. I found him on the bridge contemplating the water.
I recalled our need of men who have
good appearance and no fear of death.
I brought him to you. Do with him
what you can."

"Good! He looks like a brave fellow," said the wolf, glancing with
sharp scrutiny at Wallace. Buckford could catch but a portion of the conversation.

"Oh, he will do. And he looks the gentleman."

"Oh, quite. And he arrives oppor-tunately. I have news of the—"

"What? Do they arrive in Paris sooner than arranged?"

"They are on the way, and unless
they delay on the road they will reach Paris tomorrow. It was given out that they would arrive on Saturday, four
days from now."

Rheumatism..

In Uric Acid in the blood.
Unhealthy kidneys are the cause of the acid being there. If the kidneys acted as they should they would strain the Uric Acid out of the system and rheumatism wouldn't occur. Rheumatism is Life. Kidney Disease. Dodd's Kidney Pills have made a great part of their reputation curing Rheumatism. So get at the cause of these fearful shooting pains and stiff, aching joints. There is but one sure way—

Dodd's Kidney Pills

bed. His smiling, handsome face gave no indication to the animal eyes of the other that this young American might prove to be the deadliest foe he and his fellow conspirators could meet.

While Buckford dressed, his host sat silently watching.

"My friend," he said, "you amaze me.
You are young, handsome, brave. Why should you wish to die?"

Wallace's lips opened to say that he was far from wishing to die when he remembered that his usefulness to the conspirators depended on his supposed weakness.

"What is life after all?" he asked, with a good attempt at a gesture of despair. "Last week I had money, friends, everything. Today I have nothing. Death is preferable to a life of poverty."

"Yes, yes, that is so. But you had chosen an ignoble way of finding it."

Wallace wanted to laugh. His thoughts while standing on the bridge had been bitter enough. Who at his age, suddenly finding himself penniless and with no plans for the future, would not have had morbid and bitter thoughts? But Wallace was too brave a youth to seek death as a means of escape from poverty. The sting over, he would go to work like a man and earn his living. But in the first hours of his disappointment he knew not how to start.

"Well," he replied, "that is all a matter of taste. I don't see what difference it makes how we go."

"But there is a nobler use for life.
Think of the wrongs that are heaped upon the heads of more than half the world. Think of the crimes and tyrannies of the rich. Think of the monstrous wrong in the usurpation of power by those born to thrones."

"Well, but I'm an American."

"Do you think that is a reason why you should be deaf to the cries of humanity? Rather it is a reason why you should sympathize with men of less fortunate nations—the downtrodden ones of earth."

Wallace knew that this was merely preliminary sparring. He knew the wily conspirator was leading up to the matter of importance—the plot against the prince.

"Oh, what's the use theorizing?" he grumbled. "That man of your brotherhood met me on the bridge. I came here with him. He said something about my being of service. Now, why not come out with it at once?"

The other hesitated.

"Are you sure that you are ready, that you feel sure of yourself? Is there no doubt of your inclination to work for humanity at the cost of your life?"

Wallace looked out of the little unwashed window.

To be Continued.

SUNDAY SERVICES

Hours of Service.

Christ Church—11 a.m.; 7 p.m.

First Presbyterian—11 a.m.; 7 p.m.

St. Andrew's—11 a.m.; 7 p.m.

Holy Trinity—11 a.m.; 7 p.m.

St. Joseph's—11 a.m.; 7 p.m.

Victoria Ave. Methodist—11 and 7.

William St. Baptist—11 a.m.; 7 p.m.

Park St. Methodist—11 a.m.; 7 p.m.

Seventh Day Adventists—3 and 7.

Latter Day Saints—7 p.m.

Campbell A.M.E.—11 a.m.; 7:45 p.m.

First Baptist—11 a.m.; 7:30 p.m.

A meeting for men only will be held Pastors and others who contribute news items to this department of Saturday's Planet will confer a favor by seeing to it that their "copy" reaches this office not later than Friday noon of each week. Matter received later than that hour cannot be guaranteed insertion.

International Bible Lesson for Tomorrow—The Arrest of Stephen—Acts vi, 7-15.

Golden Text—"Fear not them that kill the body, but are not able to kill soul."

The wise settlement of the first dispute about providing for the indigent widows of the church brings into prominence the devoted Stephen, full of faith and with the holy power of God working through him. Satan to offset this, stirs up the Jews and their religious rulers, who have Stephen arrested and accused of blasphemy how he had dared to teach the tools of the devil one become in their blind zeal for their Temple, Moses and the Letter of the Law. They would destroy God's workmen and the work of God in saving and healing men—for they had not the holy spirit, although they had a temple and a law. When God's people sleep the wicked one sows tares and lets them sleep; but when they wake and work then he stirs up persecution and obstruction—good signs. Let Christians rejoice when persecuted for Christ and His cause. Oh! that like Stephen's, our faces show with holy joy.

Church Notes.

Rev. F. H. Larkin, of Seaford, recently of this city, will preach both morning and evening in the First Presbyterian Church to-morrow.

Christ Church—Rev. Robt. McCook will conduct the services, and Rev.
Arthur Murphy, special mission preacher, will occupy the pulpit both morning and evening to-morrow.

The pastor, Rev. Dr. Battisby, will preach in St. Andrew's Church to-morrow, morning and evening.

Rev. F. Herbert, O. F. M., of St.
Joseph's Church, will preach the Lenten sermon to-morrow night.

Rev. T. Beverley Smith, rector, will occupy the pulpit of Holy Trinity Church to-morrow.

The Rev. R. D. Hamilton, of London, will conduct Sunday School Anniversary services in Park St. Methodist Church to-morrow, both morning and evening.

The pastor, Rev. T. T. George, will occupy the pulpit of the Victoria Ave.
Methodist Church to-morrow.

On Sunday evenings during Lent the rector, Rev. Beverley Smith, of Holy Trinity Church, will preach a course of sermons on the Parable of the Prodigal Son. The second of the series will be preached to-morrow evening.

Rev. J. J. Ross will conduct both services in the William St. Baptist Church to-morrow at 11 a.m. Christian Class for men at three o'clock in the afternoon. In the morning he will take as his subject "The Baptism of the Holy Spirit," and in the evening "The Jewish Aspect of the Kingdom."

All are welcome.

Rev. James Walker and Bro. Warren Martin will resume their special services at Green Bush Church tomorrow.

Salvation Army, Union Depot—Knee drill at 7 a.m., meeting for promotion of holiness at 11 a.m. Christian followship at 3 p.m., soul winning service at 7:30 p.m. All services for citizens and soldiers.

Services will be held in the Saints' Auditorium, next Aberdeen bridge, tomorrow as follows:—Prayer meeting at 2 p.m., Sunday school at 3 p.m., preaching at 7 p.m.

At Holy Trinity Church, during Lent, there will be a short service, with address, every Friday afternoon at 5 o'clock.

A cordial invitation is extended to all to attend the special services in Christ Church.

The pastor, Rev. T. H. Henderson, B. A., will preach in the Campbell A.
M. E. Church to-morrow.

Services will be held in the First Baptist Church, King St., to-morrow as follows:—Preaching at 11 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. by the pastor, Rev. L. Bradley; Sunday school at 12:30 p.m.

Rev. Jarvis will occupy the pulpit of the First Baptist church, King St., on both occasions to-morrow.

The Victoria Ave. Epworth League meets on Friday evening at 8 o'clock.
Christ Church Sunday School meets