The long experience of dramatic high-ways and by-ways that Miss Arthur position of leading lady of the best amer-ican company, was useful to the Cana-dian actress, as probably the best train-lag for her work that she could have received. Perpetual practice, intermin-able days and months of hard work, train, develop and strengthen talent more than all the schools of acting in the world. There was no feminine emo-tion she had not essayed to portray, there was no age from childhood to de-crepitude she did not attempt to repre-sent. She had made a good Eliza in "Uncle Tom's Cabin": she had been ap-plauded as the heroine of a gallery-stirring Irish melodrama: she had been successful as Juliette and creditable as the Widow Melnotte. ents received the recognition of the great public. Yet both these actresses, with all their promise, their power and their fineness, show distinctly that their achievement is to be limited to that which comes within the comprehension, and is of the same strain, as their own personalities. Both Miss Marlowe and Miss Arthur are, as artists, completely bound by their own limitations. They can not touch a type outside themselves. When, how-ever, they do seek to portray the charac-ter which is of their own tempearment, then they show of what fine metal their talent is composed. Their understanding -feeling, as it were, at ease and at home -all their trained intelligence, their na-tive comprehension, their dramatic power and sympathetic insight, come to the surface and reveal what sacred fire it is within them that makes the critical spectator single them out from the mass as the ouly two young actresses in this country, who show real originality, power and pomise.

AN "OUT-OF-DATE" COUPLE. We are "so out of date," they say-Ned and I:

We love in an old-fashioned way, Long since gone by. He says I am his helpmate true In everythics

In everything: And I-well. I will own to you He is my king.

We met in no romantic way 'Twist "glow and gloon He wooed me on a winter day,

And in-a room: Yet, through life's hours of stress and storm, When griefs befell, Love kept our small home corner warm, And all was well.

Ned thinks no woman like his wife-But let that pass: Perhaps we view the dual life Through roseate glass: Even if the prospect he not bright, We hold it true

That heaviest burdens may grow light When shared by two.
