INCREASED SALARIES.

County Treasurer and Road Superintendent Get $1,500 Each.

Yesterday's Session of the Wise Men Was Quite Quiet.

Will Pay Part of Cost of Raising King Street.

The afternoon session of the County Council passed off quietly—none of the Councilors being in such a fiery mood as at the morning's session, although some of them at times spoke rather strongly. It was decided to help pay the expenses of raising a certain portion of the roadbed upon which the radial cars run, and which at the present time is too low.

A motion was carried as follows: Resolved that this Council grant the Hamilton Radial Company $200 to assist in raising the tracks on King street, same to be done during 1909, under the supervision of the Road Commissioner and superintendent.

The tracks referred to are on King street, between Kenilworth avenue and the English Church, a distance of three miles. The reason the Radial Company asked the Council to help pay the cost was because the roadbed had been lowered under their supervision. The cost of raising the tracks will be in the neighborhood of $500. The company did not ask for any stated amount.

Mr. Geo. Waller, superintendent of the company, appeared before the Council and explained the matter to the complete satisfaction of the Councilors. The by-law passed by the Council to provide for half the fines of automobilists to be paid to the person arresting them, legal or illegal? That is the question the Council cannot get away from. The Councilors were just beginning to congratulate themselves on having disposed of that question when it popped again.

Magistrate Foran smilingly explained to the Council that he had some money which was weighing heavily in his pocket. He said it was not the usual thing for a person to appear before the Council to endeavor to give them money. The money he had collected for fines amounted to $300, half of which had been paid to the constable making the arrests. He wanted to know what to do with the remainder.

Warden Gage informed the Council that the Solicitor's advice was that the money be paid over to the Government. Councillor Lawson—I think we should take the money, give a receipt to Mr. Foran and let the Government sue for it.

Councillor Binkley said he thought such a course was improper as the solicitor's advice had been given in the matter.

"Not in writing, though," replied Councillor Lawson.

"No," responded the warden with a smile.

Mr. Foran suggested that the money be paid over to the county, and they could then regulate matters. The suggestion was acted upon, and as the money passed out of the possession of the Magistrate he heaved a sigh of relief.

An order was made that the county reimburse the Township of West Flamboro for the expenses of placing Joshua Arnold in the Insane Asylum. The amount was $15.80.

The application of the superintendent for an increase in salary was discussed, and it was finally agreed that it be increased from $1,000 to $1,500.

It was explained by the warden that the reason Mr. Taylor had applied for an increase was because he had to bear his own expenses, which were considerable. The superintendent was an overworked man, as very often when evening arrived he would have to drive 20 miles to get home. On numerous occasions he had to work on Sundays.

"No, no, Mr. Warden, it wasn't necessary for him to work on Sundays," broke in Councillor Binkley.

The Warden explained why this had been necessary.

Councillor Binkley then suggested that an assistant be engaged to look after the office work, but the Warden explained that the office work and the road work were inseparable.

Councillor Lawson made the motion for the increase. Councillor French objected to such a large increase.

The yeas and nays were taken and 7 were for and 7 against. The Warden voted for it and the motion was declared carried.

Treasurer Cochrane was granted an increase from $1,300 to $1,500. No objection was raised, and some of the Councilors spoke in very high terms of the Treasurer.

It isn't enough to hope for the best. In these days of competition you must fight for it.

It seems as though women's styles change so often merely to keep the men's noses down to the grindstone.

SWIMMING.

Beaver and Hamilton Clubs Gave a Carnival.

The Beaver and Hamilton Swimming Clubs held a joint swimming carnival at the Y. M. C. A. last evening, and the exhibitions were among the best that have been witnessed in this city for some time. The styles of swimming as shown by Prof. Corson were extra good. Prof. Corson is a veritable fish. He has been used to the water since seven years of age. He has attained that stage of proficiency which makes him perfectly at home in the water. One of the remarkable features of his swimming is his ability to use his feet perfectly, a very hard thing to accomplish. Prof. Corson's body is also always behind his stroke, so that he obtains all the force out of it possible. In last night's swimming he showed some remarkable feats, including swimming with hands and feet tied, which necessitates a twisting of the body which is something original in the art of fancy swimming. He included in his exhibition three styles of crawl stroke, trudgeon stroke, revolving trudgeon, revolving crawl, English over-arm, numerous back strokes, shark scaper, swimming backwards and an imitation of a porpoise.

Mr. H. Lazier, champion long plunger of Canada, plunged a distance of sixty feet.

Mr. T. Bath, of Oakville, one of the cleverest speed swimmers of Canada, gave an exhibition of the crawl stroke. He secured wonderful speed out of the stroke.

The police life-saving stunts was one of the features of the programme. The police and Hamilton Swimming Club relay races were very hotly contested, and the finishes close. An exhibition of fancy swimming by Mr. T. W. Sheffield was much enjoyed.

F. Blouey and S. Job gave exhibitions of under-water swimming.

OVERLOADED CITY DOCK.

That Was Cause of Accident There Last Saturday

In Which Leo Barry Lost His Life in an Instant.

Men Heard Crackings, But Had Not Notified Company.

After a hearing that lasted over four hours, the jurymen brought in the following verdict at the inquest held last night in No. 3 Police Station, on how Leo Barry came to his death.

"We the jury find that Leo Barry came to his death on December 4, 1909, according to the evidence, by the dock giving way and throwing him into the water and drowning him. We also find the cause was overloading of the said dock, causing the death of the said Leo Barry."

Dr. Baugh was coroner. Over two dozen witnesses were called. Herbert Warring said he was piling wire at the warehouse in question. About 600 tons were piled. The shed or warehouse seemed safe, but occasionally a cracking noise was heard, to which no importance was attached. A few of the men working there mentioned to one another about the noise. No precautions were taken after the noises were heard. He was about 10 feet from the spot that gave way. It gave way suddenly, but he saw no one go down, as he had his back to the part that caved in. He knew it had given way by the loud noise. Prior to the accident he saw Leo Barry and William Warring working on the spot. Directly after the accident he saw William Warring, who was unhurt. Witness did not see Barry again until he was taken from the water. He had never heard any complaints made about the warehouse.

William Warring, 94 Wood street, said he was working at the warehouse last Saturday. He was employed piling wire, which was being taken from a boat alongside the warehouse. About 800 tons were put in the warehouse. At the time of the accident he was just about to throw on to the pile a bundle of wire, when the floor gave way without any warning. It was remarked among the workmen that the dock was not safe, and just a little while before the accident he heard remarks made about the unsafety of the dock. No precautions were taken to insure the safety of the dock, though the men, amongst themselves considered there was enough wire on it. He did not fall at the time of the accident, but just before it occurred he saw deceased working where the floor gave way. He did not see deceased fall. When the cracking noise was heard, no complaints were made to the foreman.

John Sullivan said he was rolling wire from the door of the warehouse to Leo Barry and William Warring. He knew nothing of the condition of the shed. He guessed there was about 600 tons in the warehouse. He did not notice the creaking noise, and as to the safety of the dock, he could not give an opinion. He saw Barry falling when the accident happened. Immediately after the accident a foreman appeared on the scene, and all the men were ordered out of the warehouse, as four were expressing that the building would collapse.

Herbert Stride, also employed piling wire, said in his estimation there were about 400 tons piled in the warehouse, and the structure on which it was piled looked strong enough to carry more than that. He saw the accident, and told of it occurred, which he described in much the same way as the previous witnesses.

George Jobborn was working on the dock at the time of the accident. He said the dock had a heavier weight on lots of times. Witness said in his idea there were between 500 and 600 tons.

Patrick Mulvale, another employee on the dock, estimated the weight of wire at the time of the disaster at about 400 or 500 tons. He had seen the dock with more weight on, the last time, about two weeks ago. He had heard remarks made that the dock was not safe, when such heavy weights were on it. The remarks were only made among the dock employees. Witness said he had heard cracking noises on various occasions, but they did not excite his fear, as personally he attached no importance to them. He was about 40 feet away when the accident occurred, but did not see it.

John Hughes considered there was between 500 and 600 tons of wire in the warehouse. He had often heard cracking noises. When he heard the crash he looked round and the floor was gone.

John Gorman, one of the foremen at the dock, said he was in charge of a gang of men last Saturday, unloading wire from the ship "City of Montreal." He estimated the weight of wire on the shed at the time of the accident, at between 500 and 600 tons. On different occasions heavier weights had been piled on the dock. About three weeks ago 800 tons were piled on it. He considered the dock safe, even when it had 800 tons on.

When the accident occurred he was talking to deceased and William Warring, when without warning the floor gave way, carrying Barry with it. Gorman said he had heard remarks that the dock was not safe, for some time. The remarks had never been reported to any of the authorities.

John Anderson, City Building Inspector, said he made an inspection of the warehouse and dock when it was being erected in July, 1908. His inspection consisted merely of looking over the superstructure.

Percy Grant, local agent for the Merchant Mutual Steamship lines, said he was not at the dock on Saturday morning. Gorman received his instruction from him (Grant). Witness declared that in his estimation the dock was safe enough to bear the weight of the whole cargo. No reports were ever made to him that the shed was not safe. The dock was leased by the company from the city. Several times the timbers of the dock had been examined by witness and his foreman. Mr. Grant admitted that goods had been taken out from the front end of the warehouse about a month ago. That answer was given to a question by one of the jurymen.

Edward Culligan said he did not know much about the accident, but in his opinion, the dock was a disgrace. Two weeks ago he saw the City of Ottawa steam in and strike the dock, which shook like a leaf. He said that Gorman said then: "This is a shaky dock."

Thomas Murphy said two months ago he saw men unloading wire there, and saw the floor sag. It sagged so much that they took the wire off. Witness had seen since that when a boat was coming in, the dock hands ran off. He did not think the dock was capable of holding 500 or 600 tons.

W. Brennan, secretary of the Board of Works, said extensive repairs were made to the dock in 1908. The work was done by day labor by the city, under a man named Lighthart.

V. Lighthart said he was foreman on the repairing work done to the dock. He was employed by the city, and he considered the work when completed a first class job.

Ex-Ald. Howard said he was Chairman of the Harbor Committee in 1908, when the dock was repaired. In his estimation, the job when completed was a good one.

City Solicitor Waddell said the appropriation for repairing the dock was $1,500, but before completion $4,500 was expended.

City Engineer Macallum said he had looked over the scene of the accident twice. According to his calculation about 500 tons were in the warehouse at the time of the accident. The important pieces of timber, that could furnish evidence, were under the water. What timbers were broken showed clean breaks.

John Heddie, Assistant City Engineer, inspected the repairs made to the dock in 1908, and considered the job a good one.

The members of the Harbor Committee, Ald. Jutten, Sweeney, Applebach, Hopkins, Crerar, Gardner and Guy, were called. Chairman Guy said in his opinion the dock was a good one. All the others merely told of visiting the dock last spring, while making their annual inspection.

Ex-Ald. Franks said that, in his opinion, the warehouse should have had more piles under it. He helped to build the dock, and during the time of building spoke to an alderman about insufficient piles being used, but when questioned by City Solicitor Waddell as to the name of that alderman he could not remember. He considered the repair work done in 1908 was a pitched up job.

John Berlinghoff said he had worked around the dock, and considered the work done not first-class. He said there are some timbers there now that the rats run through. Last winter he noticed that the tops of some of the piles were not in first-class condition. John Gorman was again called, and denied using the expression the witness Culligan swore he did, for he never saw Culligan at the time.

Dr. McBride attributed death of deceased to drowning.
