Thackeray thus applies his sarcasm to e ridiculous affectation of indifference to les and honorary decorations, so common titles and honorary decorations, so common to modern utilizarians: "Yes, knighthood is abourd; and chivalry an idiotic supersition; and Sir Walter Manny was a zany; and Nelcon, with his flaming stars and cordona, splendant upon a day of battle, was a madman; and Murat, with his crosses and orders at the head of his squadron charging victorious, was only a traveling Mountebank; who had been a tavern waiter, and puffed up with abourd vanity about his dress and logs. And chilvalry is naught; and honor is humbur, and gentlemanlhood is an extinct folly; and ambition is madness; and deaire of distinction is criminal vanity; and glory is bosh; and fair fame is vanice is naught; and honor is humbur; and gentlemanhood is an extinct folly; and ambrition is madness; and deaire of distinction is criminal vanity; and glory is bosh; and fair fame is idleaces; and nothing is tribe but two and two and the color of all the world is drah; and all men are equal; and one man is as good as another—and a great deal better—as the Irish philosopher said. Is this so? Titles and badges of honor are vanity; and in the American revolution you have this Excellency, Gederich, C. W. Jan. 11, 18 4. w508w38
