Sunday Conversation.

Tuesday 8th Dec., 1874.

The most interesting of this week's proceedings in the Commons, perhaps, was the debate on the Supply Bill. Of all the subjects that have come up for discussion during this session this was would have been one of the best opportunities of displaying the powers of the House of Commons and orators of all parties occupying the floor. Instead of this we would ask any one who has heard or read the debate to say whether there was one speech made on that subject other than that of Mr. Cameron, Ontario? Instead of the argument that the Bill should be against the wishes of the best interests of the country, the time of the House was occupied in listening to a long series of speeches having for their theme the assertion that the redistribution of seats arranged by the Government was a party purpose. Some of the speeches were made in favour of the consent and direct opposition of municipalities chiefly concerned, the first ground being the extraordinary waste of money and time involved, and the latter on the ground that the proposed changes would not be beneficial to the Opposition party they were made against the Bill. Among those who parties in the municipalities chiefly affected, thus evidently showing that the measure could not be beneficial to the particular benefit of any party. Among those who thus was Mr. Archibald, who himself as perfectly satisfied with arrangement as far as his own county was concerned—adding however, that the return there of the Administrationists. Mr. Fitzsimmons, who intending to complain of with regard to change made in his constituency, Mr. Scott (Grey) contended that constituents of both parties were opposed to the division of that county. But it was left for Scott (Peterboro) to carry the absurdity which he ignored in stating that the result of the Reform townships from which is now represented in the House by two Oppositionists, the return there of course. When the general principle proposed changes were for the the country at large was concerned, and it was virtually admitted that been referred to during the surely the other grounds were sufficient for having the measure approval of the municipalities concerned were but trivial, wise our legislation would be for the interest of the minority as well as that of the majority.

In the course of his speech Hon. Mr. Cameron paid the Ministry a compliment which, coming from a political opponent, was extraordinary. In the death of the late Sir Allan McNab for Glengarry, he said that the House had lost a valuable member, and Mr. Craig. He was elected to support the Government of which he was a member, and when Mr. Cameron, was a member, they went out of office, but with a strong party leanings, he had always honorable gentlemen opposite in many of their measures, in fact nearly all of them would at this time be found. If Mr. Cameron was as willing to adopt the language he made use of would find that he was certainly correspondingly complimentary to the gentlemen on his side of the House.

An interesting discussion arose on the second reading of Mr. Bethune's Compulsory Voting Bill. Mr. Bethune himself made a capital speech in support of the measure, which was also supported by many others on both sides of the House, among those who spoke in its favour being Hon. Mr. Cameron, and Messrs. Prince, Detoche, Meredith and Scott of Peterboro. After the discussion Mr. Bethune having no desire to have the Bill become law at present, but having, he said, introduced same only for the purpose of ascertaining the feelings of the House on the question, withdrew the Bill.

In the Rykert case the committee having finished their investigations reported to the House on Thursday (finding Mr. Rykert guilty of having received for Parliamentary services $1000 from the Great Western Railway, $100 from one Edward D. Tiller and $100 from the Toronto Street Railway Co.). Several excellent and many speeches were made on both sides of the House. Owing to the near approach to the end of the session the House could not conveniently take any further action in the matter than to order the report of the committee to be printed. Mr. Rykert has reason to be thankful that circumstances have thus interfered in his favour, as otherwise he would certainly have been ignominiously expelled from the House.

The Agricultural Farm committee have reported to the House—to-day. On account of the virtual closing of the House to-day they could only present their investigation no longer, as the investigation has gone it has proved the correctness of the statements made by Mr. McKellar when he moved the appointment, and the committee had been appointed, and that they had time for further examination they would be able to connect with the Farm Mr. [illegible]'s position been [illegible] of this investigation rather [illegible] motions
