Respecting One's Rights.

BY RUTH CAMERON.

That there are a great many people in this world deficient in a proper respect for their own rights is less generally realized. But I think there are.

And furthermore I think they do a great deal of harm in the world. For you will seldom find an excessively meek person who never attempts to defend his rights without flinching about him people whom he has gotten into the habit of encroaching on the rights of others.

Self-sacrifice and self-effacement are without doubt, medicinal for the soul but it is right for any one person to attempt to keep all the soul's tonic of the family for himself?

And then again, I do not think it is right to let any one without reason keep you from being as happy as you can.

A happy life blesses humankind. "A happy man or woman is a better thing to find than a five pound note," says Robert Louis Stevenson.

"He or she is a radiating focus of goodwill; and their entrance into a room is as though another candle had been lighted. We need not care whether they could prove the forty-seventh proposition; they do a better thing than that, they practically demonstrate the great Theorem of the Livableness of Life."

If you foolishly yield your right to healthy happiness you are yielding your ability to bless the world in this way.

Among my schoolmates were two girls whose mother had died when they were quite young and who were being brought up by a stepmother. This stepmother was a very narrow, strict and over-bearing woman. I suppose she meant to do well by those children but her idea of doing well seemed to be to crush out their individuality, cut them off from normal intercourse with other young people and exercise a petty tyranny over all their doings even after they were full grown girls.

The younger of the two girls had one of these over yielding dispositions and was simply crushed by the treatment.

She wore the queer clothes, gave up dancing lessons, stayed at home from parties because her stepmother thought they might give prizes for games—a special bugaboo of hers—and in a hundred little ways allowed the life and fun to be crushed out of her.

The older girl on the other hand simply wouldn't submit. She did not leave home or go to any extremes. She simply pleasantly insisted on being allowed to be and act like other normal girls.

The younger girl, shut off from natural intercourse with other young people as she was by her foolish yielding, grew old without ever being young. She never married. She is a sad, awkward, shy woman, dissatisfied with herself and her life.

The older girl grew into a fine normal woman, married happily—against her stepmother's wishes of course—and to-day blesses the world by radiating happiness and love of life on all with whom she comes into contact.

Incidentally I ought to mention that the older girl is the stepmother's favorite.

I believe the younger girl was lacking in a proper respect for her own rights and that her weakness had ended disastrously both for herself and those about her.

Please do not think I am discounting the value of meekness and unselfishness. I am not. I reverence unselfishness as the greatest of all virtues. But I think there are times when a defense of one's individuality, a firm stand against overbearing demands, a proper respect for one's rights, will add more to the sum of the world's happiness than self-effacement and yielding.

Dear Sir—The unmitigated gall of his three Tory pawns of the East End and their heeler is not only surprising but 'tis disgusting. Four years ago when Mickey Gibbs led the Tory ticket the same hue and cry was raised: three men sure for the People's Party, when the ballots were counted it was shown, to use a common expression "that they didn't get a look in." The elections of 1904 was talked about much the same, the "Pullet" Hawley on that occasion led the Tory ticket. He was running around like a house on fire shouting that he and his colleagues would be elected with his majority. Did it happen, not on your life. The "Pullet" went so far as to publish at the time through the columns of the Tory News a notice signed by himself and colleagues in which he extravagantly stated that the lowest man on the Tory ticket would be five hundred votes ahead of the highest man on the Liberal ticket. "Ye gods, what a prophet!" What happened on that occasion? Why, the contrary, of course, and that's what's going to happen again. Mr. "Pullet," Kent, Dwyer and Ryan are vulnerable, they can't lose! Kent has been the people's faithful servant in the House of Assembly during the past several years, and I am sure, with fear of contradiction or egotism that has never been surpassed as an honest man and independent representative. Honest John Dwyer has also done his duty nobly and fearlessly to the cause of Liberalism. He is approachable, he is known by every workman; he is a workman himself and so was his father before him. That he will be elected I have not the least doubt.

Charlie Ryan is the son of one of the foremost seal killers which Newfoundland has ever produced—the late Captain William Ryan—renowned in song and story. The son is a man in every sense of the word. That he will be elected in conjunction with his colleagues let no man be in doubt. "The all truth, all air, and it will explode after polling day which is being 'got off' by this Tory clique. 'Tis impossible for Higgins to win. The voters won't accept a Red pawn and a Liberal turncoat as well. Howley was turned down by them before. He was scuttled from Placentia, he was afraid to go there. So there's no doubt but St. John's East will give him his walking ticket. As for Bartlett, Harry is a good wharfinger simply that and nothing more. He was never built for a member of the House of Assembly. After polling day when the count comes in it will be seen that the noble old East End has been true to the faith of their fathers, which was planted in them when fighting against the Tory taskmasters and their minions in the old days. They will march to the booths once more for the cause for freedom.

"East End voters fall in line, Vote for Kent, Dwyer and Ryan." Faithfully yours, HONEST GOVERNMENT, St. John's, Oct. 18th, 1913.

Your Duty.

Nothing to do with the Custom House, good friends, its only reference just now is to yourself. Let us suppose that you are a man of family with sufficient of the world's goods to keep them in comfort. Very well. You did not reach this satisfactory state of affairs without care and labour—few men do. Suppose you are awakened some night with about of alarm ringing in your ears. Too late then to talk of prudence; too late then to say: "If I had only, etc., etc." That "If" means too much to many forgetful people. Is it not always the duty of a self-respecting citizen to protect his home and thus provide for those within it. Is it any more than his duty to those depending on him to protect them as far as possible? Can you call your property your own when it is not insured? The answer to this argument is to carry insurance with Percie Johnson's agency, the most popular office in Newfoundland and the least expensive.

What a Reception.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir—Never before in the history of Burnt Point, was there such a cold reception given any public man as was accorded the Hon. (7) Spar Crosbie and Jesse Whiteway the Tory trio for Bay de Verde, at Burnt Point, yesterday. Not a flag was to be seen in the vicinity; one gun had by a 16-year-old boy sounded two or three times. But it seemed to sound to me very mournful as though it was the last day that the Tories had in power. But never mind Crosbie you have two weeks more and then you will be snowed under by the grand old Liberal hounds.

We are expecting our esteemed candidates Hickman and Barrett along to-day, when they will be heartily welcomed by 57 voters out of 63.

I will challenge any man in this district to contradict this statement, and also challenge any man to contradict that Hickman and Barrett won't be elected by at least three hundred majority.

Yours truly, FAIR PLAY, Burnt Point, Oct. 16, 1913.

It is desired to form an Orchestral Society, of both string and wind instruments. Would Ladies and Gentlemen, who are willing to join, kindly communicate with MR. A. H. ALLEN, Renelle's Mill Road. Oct 15, 1913.
