

JOLLY AND ENJOYMENT

Unprecedented Success of the I. B. S. Picnic.

Greatest Crowd of Merry-Makers That Ever Assembled on Fraser Heights.

Over 8,000 Persons at the Society's 21st Annual Outing.

Prize Winners in the Baby Show and Sports—The Banquet and the Speeches—Names of Well-Known People Who Were There, and Others Who Regretted They Could Not Attend.

"Nothing's too good for the Irish" is what everybody said and everybody meant yesterday. It was the 21st annual picnic of the Irish Benevolent Society, and on the occasion fully 8,000 people gathered on the heights overlooking Old Erie's shore. The presence of the circus in St. Thomas did not seem to keep the people away from Port. It took 50 coaches, all of which were filled to overflowing, to convey the picnicers to the lake shore, and the majority of these went away in the morning. The day was delightful, and everybody seemed in good humor, the only serious trouble being that of finding room and rapid transit for the crowd of pleasure-seekers on their way to and from the Port.

On the heights a surging mass of humanity mingled together all day. White linen spread on the grass and covered with delicacies of all kinds met the eye in every direction, while around these happy groups of picnicers gathered. The day was marred by one or two disturbances, and one of these resulted in closing the Fraser House bar. A fight took place in which bottles and glasses played a conspicuous part for a moment, and then the room was cleared and the doors locked. This was no fault of the society, and was a source of regret to its officers. In every large gathering there are some who believe that Port Stanley was designed for their special benefit, and they show little consideration for other people.

The day was enjoyed in many ways. Bathing and boating was a favorite pastime, and in this many indulged toward evening. The only events which did not materialize were the members' race and the baseball match between London and St. Thomas. All the sports were enjoyed and interesting, especially the dancing. Following are the

THE BABY SHOW.
Events of this character are always a drawing card, but the interest taken yesterday was more than ordinary. William Wilson, B. C. McCann and Ald. Carrothers performed their parts as nurses. The baby Mr. Wilson fondled had a particular desire to brush his silk hat, and it was to sleep, and Ald. Carrothers quieted the child he carried by occasionally giving it President Fitzgerald's hat to play with. The babies were numerous, and the judges, Wm. Wilson, B. C. McCann, Ald. Carrothers, Jos. Scandrett and J. W. McIntosh, had a difficult task to perform in arriving at a conclusion as to what child best deserved first money. One lady thought the judging was not square, and she didn't hesitate to tell Ald. Carrothers that he wouldn't give first to anybody unless they lived in his ward. The following were the winners: 1. Infant of Mrs. McManus; 2. George Moore, 9 months old; 3. Alex. McPhail, 8 months; 4. Myrtle White, 4 months.

THE BANQUET.
The annual banquet in connection with the picnic was not so well attended as on some other occasions, but was most enjoyable. The menu was an elaborate one, and ample justice was done by all who sat down. First Vice-President J. L. Fitzgerald, in the absence of the president, Mr. T. W. Scandrett, occupied the seat at the head of the table, and, in a brief speech, bid all a hearty welcome to the 21st annual picnic, the greatest and the grandest of them all. The Irish were in his opinion B. P. O. E.—best people on earth.

The toast of "The Queen" was received with the National Anthem and cheers.
In response to the toast of "Sister Societies" Mr. R. A. Jones, of the Sons of England and St. George's Society, suggested that a union picnic of the three great societies—the Irish Benevolent, St. George's and St. Andrew's—be held. The intermingling and amalgamation of the different societies resulted in much benefit all round. He spoke of the Irish as a noble nation, and one of the greatest under the sun. Dealing with societies from an executive standpoint, there were many things that needed change. Those who did the work were always the ones blamed when there was any fault to find, and that, too, by members whose interest in the society amounted to little.

Mr. J. W. McIntosh, on behalf of St. Andrew's Society, regretted the absence of the president of that society. He expressed his pleasure at being present, and complimented the Irish Benevolent Society on the splendid success of their picnic. Mr. McIntosh was then called on for a song, and rendered "Denny Blake".

Chief Williams, on behalf of the Police Benefit Society, thanked the Irish Benevolent Society for the kind invitation. He agreed that a union picnic of the three societies, the English, Irish and Scotchmen, would be a grand affair. He concluded with a well-timed story.

"The Dominion Government" was the next toast. Capt. Dunn, of the revenue cutter Petrel, in responding, said he could say little about the Dominion Government beyond the fact that they kept him in line. He was pleased to say that yesterday he had handed over to the bank $400, the proceeds of a seizure. He was unacquainted with many heads of the government, "I know Mr. Davies," he continued, "and he is a fine man. I always speak well of the bridge that carries me over safely. I don't know many of the ministers, and what is more, I don't want to."

Bursar Jones followed with a few brief remarks, thanking the society for their consideration. He had never heard of the I. B. S. before he came to Western Canada, and he would never forget them. Elgin Countess' brought a happy response from Peter Fox, on behalf of Elgin.

Ald. McPhillips, on behalf of the mayor and council of London, thanked the society for the invitation. He was pleased to know that the council this year had been more liberal than ever in the matter of grants to charitable societies. He pointed out that the council contained more Irishmen this year than ever before, and that in four wards an Irishman headed the police. McKinley, Dewey and Hobson were all Irish, and these illustrated the nation's worth.

Cheers for the Queen brought the proceedings to a close.
Among those present were: J. W. McIntosh, Chief Williams, R. A. Jones (president St. George's Society), C. W. Davis, John Forristal, Wm. McPhillips, John Carling, James Murray, James Egan, P. F. Boyle, Stephen Grant, Ald. McPhillips, Jerry McDonald, J. Pocock, W. F. Dickinson (Edna, Neb.), Bursar Jones (S.S. Petrel), Thomas Morkin, B. C. McCann, L. Paladino, J. Paladino, W. Wilson, W. Brophy, George Macbeth, and Capt. Dunn, of the revenue cutter Petrel.

Letters of regret were received from Rev. Canon Sir John Carling, Thos. Beattie, M.P., Past President Mulkern, Thomas Scandrett and others. The energetic president, Thomas Scandrett, although in England, did not forget the society and the picnic. He sent from Ireland half a dozen blackthorns of a very desirable kind. Mr. John Pocock, one of which bears a gold plate in the shape of a shamrock leaf, suitably inscribed, and which was to have been presented to Past President Mulkern, but he was not present. The walking canes were accompanied by a letter, in which the president stated that he hoped the executive would not relax any of their old-time energy in their endeavor to make the annual picnic of the I. B. S. its usual success.

Much credit is due to the following executive officers for their efforts in making the affair a success: Dr. Hodges, John Forristal, T. H. Smallman, P. Mulkern, W. J. Reid, John O'Neil, Jerry Collins, James Magee, Q.C., M. F. O'Meara, J. W. Little, James Egan, Ed. Meredith, Q.C., B. C. McCann, Hume Cronyn, Ald. McPhillips, Stephen Grant, John M. Daly, Dr. Sippi, John Lewis, Dennis Mason, John M. Keary, W. C. Fitzgerald, Wm. Brophy, John Labatt, James Murray, W. D. Regan, R. M. C. Tootie, James S. Brown, N. Graydon, Ald. Stephen O'Meara, Col. Leys, M.P.P., Thomas Beattie, M.P., Maurice Dillon, John Garvey, Jerry McDonald.

NOTES.
The last train arrived from Port about 2 a.m. today.
There were rumors of a drowning accident at the Port, but there appears to be no foundation for the story.
Conspicuous among the picnicers was the genial friend of Mr. Michael Phelan, of Mill Street, who felt quite young again, and enjoyed himself as well as the most youthful there. By the way, Mr. Phelan, who was quite a sportsman at one time, is talking of taking a run to Muskoka this fall, deer shooting.

THE TELEPHONE FRANCHISE

A Letter on the Question by Mr. T. H. Smallman

On Behalf of the People's Telephone Company—Their Claims to Consideration.

To the Editor of The Advertiser:
Some short time ago there were a number of articles published in our city press calling attention to the formation of the People's Telephone Company as a corporation that was endeavoring to give a cheap and efficient telephone service to our citizens. At a more recent date several articles appeared in the same papers, copied from various sources, and intimating to the public that several independent companies that had been formed in towns across our borders had existed but for a short time, and resulted in serious loss to the stockholders, and that the public were not to be misled upon by investors, the evident object being to damage the People's Company in public estimation. I have neither the time nor the inclination to investigate matters of this character, but I wish to say for your information and that of the public generally, that the People's Telephone Company of London, Ont., is composed of business men whose standing and reputation is well known to the majority of our citizens, and I think that such men as Robert Fox, president of the Canadian Savings Society; Col. F. B. Leys, M.P.P.; John R. Minihinnick, M. M.A.; John Milne, of the Northern Assurance Company; Thomas H. Purdon, John Labatt and R. A. Bayly, should be sufficient guarantee to the public that anything they undertake will be conducted on a straightforward and business basis.

Some few days ago the above-named gentlemen applied to our city council for a franchise, which was granted them for fifteen years, but in that franchise there was no provision made for an extension or a purchase. In fact, at the expiration of the fifteen years the company would be in the hands of the public, and the telephone instruments would be distributed throughout the city of London, and the corporation might then serve the Bell Telephone Company's franchise with the city having expired in June last, and that company having refused to renew the agreement with the city, and having applied to the government at Ottawa for power to increase their telephone rates—which are at present in some cases exorbitant (as witness their recent reduction) the promoters of the People's Telephone Company thought it an opportune time to afford the citizens of London a cheap and efficient service, and to relieve them from the threatened monopoly and oppression of the Bell Telephone people.

I regret to say that our city council, in their wisdom, have seen fit to deny the company a fair and business-like franchise, and if their action is the means of causing the company to withdraw, the citizens will know on whom to place the responsibility.

In evidence of the fact that the Bell people realize the serious effects the new company is likely to have on their operations here, they immediately set about reducing the prices of telephone service to their customers, and instead of paying $25 or $30 a year, as some of their customers have been and still are paying, a number of new contracts, I understand, have been entered into by the Bell Company at $20 per annum for unlimited service. Taking this on the basis of the thousand and odd telephones in the city, it is apparent to the average citizen that the Bell Company has already resulted in a very large saving (about $10,000 per year) to the users of telephones in this city.

I trust the council may, on more mature consideration, be induced to grant the reasonable franchise asked for by the People's Company, when the citizens may rest assured that a cheap and efficient service will be furnished, and their interests guarded from the grasping effects of the monopoly which at present exists.

I understand St. Thomas is organizing a company on similar lines to the People's. The following clipping, taken from this morning's Free Press, will give the public some idea of the benefits to be derived from competition in telephone service: "The Bell Telephone Company's new rates went into force at St. Thomas yesterday. For residential telephones the charge will be $20 per line in the year, and on a line $15, and $25 for business places."

Trusting that I have not encroached too much on your valuable space. Very truly yours, T. H. SMALLMAN, London, Aug. 4.

TO PARENTS AND TEACHERS.

To the Editor of The Advertiser:
During the past year my duties as secretary of the Kensington Area No. 1 have brought me into contact with the pastors of nearly two score cities. In almost every city they have spoken to me of the deplorable prevalence of vice among children and young people. Facts have been brought to light which are shocking in the last degree. I am not speaking of children of the slums whose heredity and environment have both been vicious, but of children who belong to good homes, often Christian homes, whose parents refuse to believe evil of them until confusion forces conviction.

Statements have come to me from California, Minnesota, Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Connecticut which indicate that this corruption is widespread and exceptional at the present time.

The exceptional cause of it would seem to be the wide circulation of vicious literature. Salacious French fiction whose sale has long been a crime in England, and is now outlawed even in Paris, may legally corrupt American youth. But doubtless the worst source of contamination is the obscene literature, often illustrated with photographs, which, though forbidden by law, finds easy access to the mails, and is surreptitiously distributed by hand often on the platforms of railway stations, sometimes on the playgrounds of children.

One who has never seen this obscene literature can form no notion of it. A Christian imagination simply cannot conceive it. It might have come from the cesspool of perdition. This poison has repeatedly been found in public schools, academies and colleges. In some cases every boy and every girl in the school has confessed to having read it; and the vice which pastors are deploring is the perfectly natural result.

Two things, it seems to me, can be done, and ought to be. First, let parents and teachers break the conspiracy of silence, into which they seem to have entered. Rare are the parents who do not leave their children to learn from vicious companions the most sacred facts of their physical life. I do not believe one father in twenty does his duty by his boy, in this particular. If he does not know how to speak on so delicate and difficult a subject, let him put into his boy's hand a judicious book like "What a Young Boy Ought to Know," one of a series of dollar books by Sylvanus Steel, D. D., of Philadelphia, admirably adapted to meet the needs of parents and teachers, and which has received eminent indorsement elsewhere. Secondly, the curfew ordinance, which has been adopted in many western cities with admirable results, would throw a shield around the children during the hours of greatest temptation.

Pastors who have seen the working of this ordinance tell me that it has brought a great reformation where it has been adopted, and city officials are loud in its praise.

If we can give our children less liberty and more light there will be less vice. New York. JOSIAH STRONG.

LOST HIS GIRL

But Frank Sharpe Got His Money Back.

Windsor, Aug. 4.—The trouble between Frank Sharpe, of Owen Sound, and Miss Blanche Lafarge, of Windsor, which threatened to end in a breach of promise suit, has been settled. The lady hands back $300 he gave her during their courtship days, and he is to withdraw his suit and explain through the local papers that it was all a mistake. The girl's parents say that Sharpe insisted on her taking the money and putting it to whatever use she chose, and refused to take it back when she begged him to. She did not use the money, but laid it aside, and when he called on her on his second visit to Windsor and threw a roll of $300 into her lap, she made him take it back. When the engagement was broken off Sharpe threatened to sue her.

BY DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS.

The kidneys cannot talk except in one way. That is by making our backs ache. But people can talk about the kidneys and how to cure kidney trouble, and that is just what Mr. S. D. McEathron, the popular wine clerk of the Grand Central Hotel, has done.

Mr. McEathron says: "I have suffered for some years with pains in my back, extending over my shoulders, dizziness, headaches at times and other troubles too numerous to mention. 'I suffered very greatly, indeed, and have taken many kinds of medicines which seemed to do me no good. One box of Doan's Kidney Pills, which I got at Curry's drug store, has given me the greatest relief from the first, and now I am as sound as a trumpet. 'I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills very highly to those afflicted as I was.'"
