DEANERY OF

Ruri-Decanal Chapter, Sunday School and Lay Workers' Association at Thorndale.

A meeting of the ruri-decanal chapter, Sunday school and lay workers associations of the Deanery of Middlesex, was held yesterday afternoon and evening in St. George's Church, Thorndale, of which Rev. R. S. W. Howard, B.A., is incumbent. The rural dean, Rev. Canon Smith, presided, and Rev. G. B. Sage acted as secretary. There was a good attendance from London and other parts of the country. The afternoon session was devoted to the rural dean's address, deanery business matters and Sunday school reports, followed by an excellent paper by Rev. H. A. Thomas, of Lucan, on the "Personal Profit of the Teachers." discussion was opened by Mr. J. H. A. Beattle in a practical address, Rev. J. H. Moorhouse also speaking on the same topic. Dr. F. T. Harrison then gave an admirable address on "Influence." The discussion was opened by Rev. G. B. Sage, followed by Archdeacon Davis and others. The question drawer was then opened, and answers given by Rev. Canon Richardson in a satisfactory manner. An adjournment was made at 6 o'clock to the hall, where a splendid supper was prepared by the ladies of St.

George's Church. The evening session was devoted to an address on "Lay Work" by Dr. Harrison; an address on "Wall Building" by Rev. C. C. Owen, followed by discussion, in which Revs. Archdeacan Davis, J. H. Moorhouse, Canon Richardson, A. H. Rhodes, H A. Thomas, Dr. Harrison and others took part. The principal address was given by Rev. ### A PERFECT FOOD

Glowing Testimonial From a Grateful Mother.

The following unsolicited testimonial from a grateful mother explains why the Health Food Company's products are so popular. They are equally good for infant and adult, because they are a perfect food. All leading grocers sell Granose, Granola and Caramel Cereal To the Battle Creek Sanitarium

Health Food Company: "Gentlemen .- You do not advertise your Granola Flakes as an infant food, and yet, unless my experience has been exceptional, you should do so. When my baby was five weeks old I became unable to nurse him, and having the Granose Flakes in the house-for we like them as a supper dish—I prepared some for him, till I could decide upon permanent supplemental diet for him. But he relished it so well, and it agreed with him so perfectly that I soon decided to look no further. He is now seven and a half months old, and has been fed on the Flakes three times daily for over six months. A looseness of the bowels, which had troubled him from birth, disappeared within a few days when I began using the Flakes, and has never returned. He is a model baby, healthy, happy and thriving. I never dose him for colic. constipation, or, indeed, any trouble, for he never has them. I prepare the Flakes by pouring boiling water on a cupful of them, mixing up and adding little cream or milk and sugar. It makes a very inexpensive baby food, and in my opinion a perfect one. Last night they introduced a little variety by hauling one of the large guns that guard the front of the barracks around to the quadrangle in

Matrimonial.

BALLANTYNE-LORANGER.

A very pretty wedding took place at the residence of Miss Jessie Loranger, 25 Cartwright street, at 2:30 o'clock, this afternoon, when Miss Georgina Arnott Loranger was married to Mr. James Ballantyne, of Montreal. Rev. W. J. Clark performed the ceremony, in the presence of the immediate relatives, some of whom came from Toronto and Montreal. The bride, who was attired in a fawn traveling suit, was assisted by her sister, Miss Hattie Loranger, while the groom was supported by Mr. John Marr, of Montreal. Numerous presents evidenced the esteem in which the young couple are held by their large circle of friends. The employes of the groom, who is a well-known contractor of Montreal, sent a beautiful silver tea service. After the ceremony a tasty wedding breakfast was served. Mr. and Mrs. Ballantyne left on the Grand Trunk at 4:40 this afternoon to spend their honeymoon in Buffalo and other eastern cities, after which they will take up their residence

Nothing of interest is to be seen until the Klip River (so named from its stony bed and banks, "klip" meaning stone in Dukch) is recrossed. Then one of the most magnificent and impressive mountain views in the world suddenly comes into view-the long and lofty serrated stretch of the Berg, Kahlamba, as the Kaffirs call it, signifying ough's fighting regiments. It fought at that the Supreme Being has hurled or Ramilies, was at Quebec in 1759, at cast down its weird and fankastic peaks from the skies. In the vicinity of Beilter's Station, fourteen miles from the Orange Free State Junction Station, there are many large grazing farms, and from this point to Brakwal Station the nature of the land changes. Instead of bare and level plain, there is broken country, consisting of lofty kopjes, or small isolatgrand cover for the Boers. It is by no means improbable that Sir George White found them occupying this spot when he moved out from Ladysmith. Brakwal Station, a trim building of stone, is perched on one of these kopjes and is of extremely picturesque appearance. Straight ahead is the zig-zag of a reversing station-that device of engineers to surmount steep gradients— and less than eight miles from Brakwal one is 1,000 feet above its station on the kopje. The hill slopes are clad with what takes the place of homeland heather, and the train toils through cuttings, below which grow the oddshaped sugar bush trees, with their firlike cones. To the southwest Tintwa's Peak looms up through the clouds, and if the day be clear a glorious paronama of Natal's hills, streams and plains may be seen from the summit of the Berg shortly before reaching Van

SHOOTING SOLDIERS

It Takes a Ton of Ammunition to Hit

One Man. Englishmen, whose sons are now facing the Boers in the Transvaal, are getting what comfort they can from stastics showing that there is only one chance in a thousand that a soldier will be killed in battle, and that, on an average, a ton of ammunition is expended for every man shot.. In the Crimean war, for example, a total of nearly 95,000,000 shots were fired, with a resulting loss of life amounting to less than 100,000, or one soldier killed to every 1,087 shots fired. During the late civil war in the United States it took 22 cwt. of ammunition, on the average, to kill a man. Further statistics show that of the wounds received in battle 45 per cent occur in the legs, 33 per cent in the domen, 21 per cent in the chest and only 1 per cent in the head.

UITLANDERS' TRUE POSITION

Impossible for Him to Get Justice-By John A. Cook, U. S. A.

Writing as one who has spent three years in South Africa, I utterly fail to understand the attempts to arouse indignation against the English with regard to their treatment of the Boers. I spent six months in Johannesburg, and Dr. Jameson's raid was one of the many flascos I witnessed during my African experience. Two weeks before that raid broke out one of my friends was pegging away down Commissioner street on business bent, when suddenly, and without any provocation, a long, uncouth Boer turned toward him and spat directly in his face, saying, 'Yea fur domed Englesman' My friend had no alternative but to bear it. Had he knocked the Boer down he would have been arrested and forced to take the consequences; but, on the other hand, had he called a "zarp," or policeman, the Boer would have sworn he assaulted him, and no matter what my friend might say when before the judge, he would have received a heavy fine, and probably a term of years' imprisonment. Is that justice? This, I assure you, is only one small instance of the numerous grievously unjust treatments the Uitlander has to put up with at the hands of the Boers.

The true situation is this: The Boers had the country for many years without any attempt whatever as a so-called civilized nation to develop its mineral and other resources; the gold lay idle, in fact almost unknown, and even in farming each family was too lethargic to cultivate more land than that which would raise just enough for its individual consumption. The Englishman-yes, and not alone the Englishman, but many a good American-came to the knowledeg of the untold wealth which lay hidden within the Transvaal. They visited that country and settled there with the full consent of the Boer population. worked as only the Englishman and American know how to work, and the results are known to all.

Extortionate taxes were levied through jealousy by the Boers; alien laws were enforced, so that it required fourteen years to become naturalized, with all its attendant liberties; and everything that the narrow-minded republic could do to oppress the Roi

TEA CARAVANS

The Enormous Business Lone on the Caravan Route Through Siberia

The newspaper published in Tomsk, called the Siberian Latest News, gives some curious details about the Russian tea caravans that transport thousands of tons of tea from China and distribute it in various parts of Siberia and Russia. During the first twenty days of January last 19,00 sleighs laden with tea passed through the city of Tomsk. The ordinary size of these tea caravans is from 50 to 70 sleighs, though sometimes from 200 to 300 are included in one caravan. The average load is five bales, each weighing from 70 to 120 pounds.

Five sledges are fastened together. drawn by one horse, and one man attends to the detachment. To the rear sledge of each group are tied a bundle of hay and a measure of oats, so that the horses may feed during the march. This facilitates progress, for the caravan does not need to halt for the purpose of baiting the horses. As the horse in front, however, does not have anything to eat before him, his place in the caravan must be changed occasionally to give him an opportunity to

The caravan travels night and day. The only halts during the 24 hours are in the villages, where the weary horses are exchanged for fresh animals. The drivers sleep on the sledges while traveling, in spite of the severe cold.

Germany makes an excellent brand of "Scotch" whisky, which finds ready sale in India.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup. Neck, Uitlander, or new comer was eagerly grasped at.

The Uitlanders—who with martyred perseverance have stuck so far to their part of the original agreement—naturally rebell against such arbitrary, autocratic overbearing measures being forced on them. They rebel justly and rightly in every sense of the word.
