burns received on Saturday, when a coal oil stove ignited and burned his home, will be necessary to clear up suspicions held by relatives and neighbors that the coal oil Mr. Purvise was using contained gasoline. The inquest will probably be held next week, and meanwhile police officers will conduct an investigation.

The occurrence recalls that of approximately a year ago, when the provincial fire marshal conducted an inquiry into an explosion near Wallaceburg, which cost the lives of two women and five children, and in which there was strong suspicion that the coal oil used in the lamp had gasoline content.
