

Men Will Do Well To Look To This Store For Their Warm Weather Wearables

Men's Straw and Panama Hats

A Complete Range of all the Correct Styles

Men's Panamas . . . $4, $5, $6

Men's Sailors in plain or fancy straws at . . . $1 to $3

Chester Belts, Hose Supporters and Suspenders

This is conceded to be the best line in Canada. We carry a complete range.

Cluett, Peabody and Regal Shirts

Flannel Outing Shirts, very correct. $1.50, $1.75, $2.00

Outing Shirts, all shades, campus collars, French cuffs, at $1.00, $1.25, $1.50

Outing Shirts, reversible collars, at . . . 75c and $1.00

Lounge Collars with Ties to Match

All sizes from 12 to 16 1/2, in all the leading shades, tubular wash ties to match. 25c each

MEN'S TWO-PIECE SUITS, 20th Century Brand.—Ready to put on or made to your own special measure. It will well repay you to see this range before purchasing.

MEN'S OUTING TROUSERS.—Made up in the correct style—from all wool materials—with belt loops, roll bottoms. 2.00, 2.50, 3.00 and 3.50

FANCY HALF HOSE.—Silk Lisle Hose in all shades. 25c Guaranteed pure silk hose, in tan, black, red or grey, regular fit for. . . . 25c

A. Brown & Co. A. Brown & Co.

S. B. HOWDEN wishes to inform the public that he has RECEIVED THIS WEEK a few lines of AMERICAN GOODS and invites you to call and inspect before purchasing elsewhere. Also a few lines of HARVEST SHOES CHEAPER THAN THE CHEAPEST TRUNKS, SUIT CASES, TELESCOPES and CLUB BAGS at the lowest prices. REPAIRING A SPECIALTY CASH OR TRADE S. B. HOWDEN

"Father grows younger every day." And his new photograph hits him to a "T". The old portrait taken twenty years ago, made him look so serious and old-fashioned—not a bit like he really is. We wouldn't part with it of course. But isn't it splendid to have a picture of him as we know him—just as he looks to-day. And father says that he's glad he gave in and had it made—that having your picture taken is far from an unpleasant experience nowadays.

MAKING THE APPOINTMENT NOW. Anlesworth's Art Studio. WATFORD.

HOW TO KEEP COOL

Toronto's Medical Health Officer Gives Some Advice.

If you want to keep cool and avoid illness during this torrid weather, study the following advice which is tendered the public by Dr. Hastings, Medical Health Officer of Toronto:

- 1. Eat no more than you have to. Avoid solids, such as meat, eggs, fats, and other heat producers. Eat fruit, vegetables and cereals. If you can endure hunger, it is better to eat nothing. "A person who cannot eat this weather is fortunate," said Dr. Hastings. "Food is rather a danger than a benefit." 2. Drink a great deal. Water and buttermilk are the best beverages. Avoid intoxicating liquors. 3. Do not worry about excessive perspiration. It is a sign that the system is holding its own against the temperature. Perspiration produces thirst. Thirst produces perspiration. Thus the body works in perpetual motion. 4. Wear light clothing, and approach nakedness as nearly as propriety will permit. "This is the time when the conventionalities must go by the board," he declares. 5. Try to get some sleep. Cold water is the best aid. Frequent baths cool the body and produce drowsiness. Get up in the night and take a cold shower or sponge bath. If you wake in an hour take another bath. Brief applications of cold water to the body do not hurt the system. Only long immersions are dangerous. 6. Do not lose your temper or indulge in simmering thought or fiery fulminations. These things are hot in themselves. If you follow these rules Dr. Hastings believes that you will escape partial sunstroke, dizziness, sick stomach, light-headedness, temporary blindness, biliousness and despondency, and will remain fairly well and cheerful in spite of the soaring thermometer.

IRISH GUARDS BAND

Most Popular of all the British Bands That Have Visited Canada

The Band of the Irish Guards, who feature the music at the Canadian National Exhibition this year, need no introduction to Canadian music lovers. They were brought over to the Canadian National Exhibition in 1906 and enthusiastically were received that it was decided to tour them from the Atlantic to the Pacific. The tour was carried out and its success marked the Irish Guards as the most popular of the splendid British Military Bands that have visited Canada. Visitors to the Exhibition that year will still remember the selection from "Cavatina" and the cornet solo that came floating in from a distant part of the grounds. The same soloist, Sergeant Hunt, is still with the band. Then you'll remember "Baby Sweetheart." The whole country was whistling and humming it.

SCHOOL REPORTS.

Report of S. S. No. 17, Brooke, for June, 1913. Book IV, Jr.—Curtis Parker 74, Kenneth Holbrook 71, Irene Lucas 68, Wilbert Parker 59, Letha Saunders 58, Stanley Lucas 57. Book III, Jr.—Wanda Lucas 70, James Taylor 67, Leona Palmer 66. Book II.—Ketta Palmer 82, Verlie Lucas 70, Stanley Healy 68, Doris Williamson 64, Frances Taylor 52. Book I, Sr.—Curtis Healy 90, Winnie Parker 76, Helen Williamson 74, Irene Lucas 68, Alex Burr 62. Book I, Jr.—A Class—Ruby Lucas 71. Book I, Jr.—B Class—John Burr 74.—M. BARR, Teacher.

WANTED GOOD LOCAL AGENT AT ONCE TO REPRESENT THE OLD AND RELIABLE FONTHILL NURSERIES. Splendid list of fruit and ornamental stock for fall delivery, 1913, and spring delivery, 1914. Start at once and secure exclusive territory. We especially handsome free outfit and pay highest commissions. Write for free particulars. STONE & WELLINGTON Toronto Ontario

Notice to Trespassers

Any person hunting, shooting or trespassing on the lands of the Ontario Agricultural College, Lot 20, Con. 5, S.E.R., Warwick, Lot West quarter 21, Con. 5, S.E.R., Warwick, or Lot East half of West half of 21, Con. 5, S.E.R., Warwick, will be prosecuted to the utmost extent of the law. ANDREW HARROWER, D. G. CAMERON, I. J. KADVEY, Warwick, June 27th, 1913. 27-4

GLASSES DO CURE WEAK SIGHT

Many persons suffer with weak sight that glasses will cure. Glasses to cure weak sight should be made right. We make glasses right for the eyes, and frames right for the face. Then you have satisfaction and relief from annoying weak vision. If your eyes are weak and need help come here and we promise you our very best attention.

GLASSES DO CURE WEAK SIGHT CARL CLASS JEWELER, ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES

NERVOUS TROUBLES ON THE INCREASE

They are Due to an Impoverished Condition of the Blood

Nervous exhaustion—neurasthenia, as medical men call it—is one of the greatest evils of the present day, for it is destroying the life and energy of thousands of men and women, or worse, driving them into insanity. The causes of this trouble include overwork, mental strain, worry, indiscretions, and sometimes it follows la grippe. The signs of this trouble are usually great weakness after any exertion, nervous headaches, trembling hands, shakiness in the legs, irritability of temper, weak digestive power, insomnia. The life of the sufferer becomes full of miseries. The true treatment for this trouble must consist of a building up process, for the above signs mean that the exhausted nerves are calling for more nourishment from the blood supply. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make new, rich, blood that feeds the starved complaining nerves, and in this way they have cured thousands of times neurasthenia, nervousness, and other nervous disorders, and have restored strength and nerve energy to despairing people. Mrs. Isaac Wilson, Calabogie, Ont., gives thanks for having been restored to health through the use of this medicine, she says:—"When I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I was a nervous wreck; I couldn't do my work, could not sleep at night, suffered from nervous headaches, and the least noise would completely upset me. Only those who have suffered from nervous trouble can tell what I endured. I doctored for a time, but did not get any benefit. Then I learned of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and sent for a half dozen boxes. By the time I had used these I was almost well, and a couple more boxes completely restored my health, and I have had no return of the trouble. I can cheerfully recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to those who suffered from any form of nervous trouble." If you are weak, nervous or out of health begin to cure yourself to-day with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. You can get them from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Warwick Women's Institute

The members of the Warwick Branch of the Women's Institute drove out to Rosedale, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Gavigan, where they were received with a royal welcome by the kind hostess and her daughters, who had invited the Branch to spend the afternoon at Dominion Day. Friends and neighbors to the number of 63 participated in the good time.

A pleasing feature of the gathering was the presence of the aged mother of the hostess, one of the pioneers of the township, of whom, alas, there are few left. It was delightful to see the homage paid to her by the friends present. The President, Mrs. Morningstar, called the meeting to order and the following program was presented, "Oh Canada" being sung with fervor, followed by a prayer by Miss Helen Laws. A paper prepared and read by Miss Mary Gavigan, entitled "Why we celebrate Dominion Day," gave a brief sketch of the founding of Confederation, showing the object, aim and advantages of the binding together of the Provinces in one grand Dominion. We are today reaping the benefits of that union, in the better modes of travelling, change in customs, schools, etc., and a type of character is being gradually developed, which is distinctly national and loyal, and before us lies the promise of a great nation. Miss Mildred Archer gave a well rendered instrumental selection, followed by a recitation "Playing the Fiddle," by Miss Verna Bryce. Miss Josephine Gavigan sang sweetly; an instrumental by Miss Beacom; a recitation by Miss Sadie Barnes followed. A duet by Miss Kimball and Miss K. Gavigan, "The Ireland where the river Kenmare flows," was nicely rendered. Mr. Robinson followed with a few remarks, showing that the Women's Institute has at least one gentleman admirer. Miss Millie Barnes, who is a favorite reciter, gave "Caleb's Courtship and what became of it." Miss Margaret Laws gave a well prepared paper on "The Union Jack" after which the young ladies sang "Rally around the old flag." A genuine surprise here awaited the audience when the president introduced Mr. John Farrell, who, in his own inimitable style, assured the ladies that he had never seen such nice-looking women and beautiful girls; turning to the graver side of life showed that there is no place so full of health, happiness and plenty as the farm. An instrumental by Miss Irene Mally was followed by a cordial vote of thanks to the hostess and all who helped to make the afternoon the overwhelming success it was. A dainty lunch was served, and after singing "God Save the King" the people dispersed, hoping all would be spared to enjoy many such gatherings on Dominion Day.

The Value of Lightning Rods

For some time Prof. W. H. Day of the Ontario Agricultural College, has been making a careful study of lightning rods. In this study he has had the co-operation of the fire insurance companies in the Province. From the returns of 18 fire insurance companies, 21 per cent. of the buildings insured were rodless. Of the buildings struck only 14 per cent. were rodless. Out of 7,000 unrodDED buildings, 37 were struck by lightning. Out of 7,000 rodDED buildings, only two were struck. These figures show that an unrodDED building is 181 times as liable to be struck as a rodDED one. Of all unrodDED buildings struck, one in every two burned. Of the rodDED buildings struck, one in six burned. This shows that properly installed lightning rods save two out of every three buildings that otherwise would be burned.

A FARM laborer writes:—"A great deal has been said in your paper regarding the farmers in securing help. I would like to say a few words from the hired man's point of view. I honestly think that the majority of farmers have themselves greatly to blame for the scarcity of hired help, simply because in the majority of cases, they will not give the newly arrived immigrant a living wage during the few summer months they hire him for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and doing innumerable chores and cutting wood in the bush nearly all winter for little more than his board. If he quits he has no other course but to go to the already crowded city and try to find something more remunerative. The farmer thus has to go over the same thing year after year, and then complains of scarcity of hired help, and inability to pay the high wages demanded by the men. Let the farmers give a decent living wage to the men, hire them for and then as soon as the rush of the season is over the hired man has the option either of being paid off, or staying on and