

CRIPPLED BY RHEUMATISM

34 N.Y. Ave., Whiting, Ind., Jan. 28th. "Will you please send me a box of Gin Pills? When I sent for the last box, I was all crippled up with Rheumatism and my face was so badly swollen, that I could hardly see out of my eyes, but after taking about six of the pills, I felt some better and after a few days, I had no more pain. I have recommended Gin Pills to some of my friends who are troubled in the same way. I never intend to be without them as I have tried so many other pills and got no results."

Von Tirpitz's Submarines

On February 19, the Von Tirpitz submarine policy came into effect. In the first five days there were 14 victims. Then there was a let up, only one being sunk, until March 9, after which 11 were sunk in a week. For March altogether the record was 27. The first seven days of April yielded 15, the rest of April 12, or 27 altogether, the same as March. The first seven days of May gave a bag of 23, the Lusitania completing that fateful number. She was the 91st altogether, and was of course worth more than all the other 90 and their cargoes together. Fish boats, coal boats, wood boats, oil boats, cargo boats, liners, all figure in the lengthening schedule. The torpedo reached the fast and the slow alike. And in his first utterance after the Lusitania sank Mr. Churchill is reported to have said that while the admiralty did endeavor to guide the big ship by use of wireless messages, the navy had not the ships necessary to insure safety for passenger and mail boats. Moreover, when the Von Tirpitz experiment began, the submarine available was of a small type, with very limited radius of travel. Now, it is alleged, the boats in use are capable of travelling thousands of miles without return to base, and are big enough to operate in the open sea, presumably beyond the opening of any sea lane the Admiralty might be disposed to permanently patrol if it had the ships. Ships which for any reason the navy has seen fit to convoy have so far been immune, although there have been mishaps at least two transport ships, possibly not sufficiently guarded; all others are in danger. No doubt, in the war sense, this is the lesson driven home by the Lusitania horror, a lesson which no amount of anger or indignation changes materially.—Beck's Weekly.

War That Stops at Nothing

(Chicago News) If it be true that neutral nations and their citizens have no rights that are respected by active participants in the war that is now making a graveyard of all Europe, including the neighboring waters, the sooner the government at Washington becomes aware of the fact the better. Either it can protect from murderous attack the lives of Americans following the ways of peace on the seas or else it cannot. If it cannot protect the lives of peaceful Americans by maintaining its neutrality it must endeavor in some other way to remove the conditions that make a mockery of peaceful international relations. Though Americans of late have received and endured stripes in the name of peace they can easily receive and endure too many.

While the national authorities are still investigating the fate of the Gulfight, which was destroyed the other day by some under water agency while flying the American flag over the heads of an American captain and crew, the British ocean liner Lusitania is torpedoed and sunk with many Americans on board. We Americans shall insist upon putting our own construction upon these occurrences after we have secured all the information obtainable in regard to them. Long and tangled skeins of diplomatic correspondence relating to the Gulfight and the Lusitania may not succeed in touching the right spot. In that event it will be necessary to try something else.

Two kinds of war are possible. One kind would be marked by respect for the restrictions laid down with some particularity by international law and by the laws of humanity. The other kind might ignore practically all laws of God and man when it was conceived to be of advantage to the belligerents to ignore them. The latter kind of war might well require sooner or later that neutral nations shed their neutrality and put on their armor in a righteous cause.

It Rubs Pain Away.—There is no liniment so efficacious in overcoming pain as Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. The hand that rubs it in rubs the pain away and on this account there is no preparation that stands so high in public esteem. There is no surer pain-killer procurable, as thousands can attest who have used it successfully in treating many ailments. So successful have wireless telephones proved on Italian warships that the government plans to install them on merchant and passenger vessels.

What They Eat

Nearly every nation has its own particular form of food and things, what some nations would not (as the expression goes) "touch with the tongue," are considered by others as the greatest luxury. For instance, while the Arab eats lotus bread and dhourra with the relish of fresh dates, the Greenlander gorges himself on animal fat and whale oil as the necessary means of keeping warmth in his body. Hindus will not touch any form of flesh, but live happily on rice and rancid butter. An Englishman is supposed to value beef and bacon above all other articles of food, while the dwellers in the Apennines live on chestnuts. In ancient days the Roman emperors were accustomed to have a peacock served at all great feasts as one of the principal dainties, while these bright birds' nests and rats form choice dishes in a Chinese menu.

Late's Cheerful Ramble

We are evermore forgetting that our stay on earth is brief, and we waste the time in fretting, hunting for all kinds of grief, making moan about the weather, magnifying every ill, as we toil along together to the boneyard on the hill. All our little griefs and worries will forsake us in a day; every dark affliction hurries, anxious to be on its way, but we lasso it and tether every trouble we can nail, as we toil along together to the boneyard in the vale. Life should be a cheerful ramble, but we make it one of woes, and we howl about the bramble till we overlook the rose. We ignore the scented heather, looking for the thistle clump, as we toil along together to the boneyard by the dump. There's no use to make us joyous, there's so much that's good and bright; here's so little to annoy us if our hearts were only right! Why bawl forth from lungs of leather, protest fierce, when all is well, as we toil along together to the boneyard in the dell.—Walt Mason.

This Is "A Bird"

You have all read fish stories, but this one is a bird story. We found it in an exchange; but it is a bird: "The wife of a Methodist minister in West Virginia has been married three times. Her maiden name was Partridge, her first husband was named Robin, her second Sparrow, and the present one's name is Quayle. There are now two young Robins, one Sparrow and three little Quayles in the family. One grandfather was a Swan and another was a Jay but he's dead and now a bird of Paradise. They live on Hawk avenue, Eagleville, Canary Islands, and the fellow who wrote this article is a lyre bird and an interesting relative of the family."

Apiary Demonstrations, 1915

Great interest has been shown in the apiary demonstrations held throughout the Province under the direction of Mr. Morley Pettit, Provincial apiarist. The attendance at the fifty-five meetings held during the season of 1914 averaged 34, while in 1915 the average was 25. Unexcelled opportunities are offered those present to have their difficulties in bee-keeping explained, and the demonstrator, having the apiary and the equipment at his disposal, is able to illustrate his remarks to great advantage. The meetings are held in the apiaries. Hives are opened and the working of the colony displayed. Attention is directed to the different kinds of cells, the various stages of the brood, the queen is pointed out, and suggestions made on the activities of the colony. Foul brood, swarming, wintering and requeening are also discussed and the time is very profitably spent both for the beginner and the experienced beekeeper.

The use of models of a wintering case for wintering four colonies outdoors will be an interesting addition to the meetings to be held this season. Already arrangements are under way for two demonstrations in each county. The date and place of meeting will be announced in the papers and on cards sent to the beekeepers. From present indications these meetings will be more widely attended and of greater value to the beekeepers than ever before. For particulars apply to the Agriculture Department, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.

No German Need Apply

Complaint is made that a number of German waiters are employed in the Chateau Laurier at Ottawa. A Quebec lady who is now in Montreal on her way back from the Capital, ordered luncheon in her suite and was startled to find a waiter with a pronounced German accent serving it. "Are you a German?" she asked. "Yes, I was born in Germany," he replied. "Then you may go and tell them to send me a waiter who is not a German," this lady ordered. She declares that the Chateau Laurier employs a large number of Germans and points out that, apart from the question of supplying work for citizens of the country with which we are at war, the presence of the Germans in the leading hotel of the Capital is dangerous. In the Chateau Laurier they have opportunities for overhearing discussed many matters of grave importance to the country, and a spy among the employes might easily secure valuable information.

Word From Home

A certain legislator in a certain well known state is said to have received the following practical effusion from his wife: Husband, dear husband, come home to me now, I'm sniffing the odor of spring; You've stayed long enough at the capital there, You're much safer under my wing. The old horse is pawing the stable like mad. The colt's in a terrible stew, The small brindie heifer has got a white calf. And the cattle are bawling for you. The voice of your Betsy is calling you, It's near the time to make soap; And some of the women are saying, my love, I am giving you far too much rope. They say there is desperate flirting up there. With widows and maids not a few, I haven't been kissed since the morning you left, But, dearie, how is it with you?—Lx.

CASTORIA For Infants and Children. The Kind You Have Always Bought

Bears the Signature of Dr. J. C. Ayer. Greece imports every pound of coal that it consumes. A suitcase has been patented with a handle on one end as well as on top. The German patent office rejects about two-thirds of the 45,000 applications it receives annually. An interesting case was heard in the Strathroy division court by Judge Elliott, in which E. Mackey was suing J. H. McGung, of Caradoc. The plaintiff alleged that a colt he bought from the defendant had died 10 days after the sale of a disease it had before the transaction. The plaintiff, however, failed to prove that the previous owner knew of the disease and the case failed.
