the eart are " are open. Must I give up the tender, ex-" quifite, refined delight of his conversaes tion, to the false opinion of a world " governed by prejudice, judging by the " exterior, which is generally fallacious, " and condemning without distinction " those fost affections without which life is scarcely above vegetation?"

"Do not imagine, my dear Lady Bel-" mont, I have really the levity I affect: or, 44 had my prejudices against marriage been ever so strong, the time I have passed " here would have removed them: I fee my "Lord and you, after an union of thirty " years, with as keen a relish for each other's conversation as you could have " felt at the moment which first joined " you: I fee in you all the attention, the tender folicitude of beginning love, with " the calm delight, and perfect confidence " of habitual friendship. I am, therefore, " convinced marriage is capable of happi-" ness
