Why do so many manufacturers put such small pulleys on their exhaust fans? They are continually giving trouble in many ways, such as hot bearings caused by tight belts, which are necessary in order to keep the fan up to the required speed in order to retain the air velocity. Also, with a small pulley, the belt has to be tight to keep from slipping. Soon as it becomes a little slack it commences to slip, then lost power takes a hand and the belt is soon burned.

Don't hesitate to ask an expert in your line why he does things a certain way. There may be some little point about it which you have not caught on to yet, and, while you may think yourself one of the wavy-high-ups, there may yet be something left for you to learn. We are never too old to learn. There are lots of new things under the sun, especially in wood-working machinery. Never be afraid to ask questions for fear some man may think you don't know quite as much as he.

—What makes a hand saw cut straight lumber? It is the uniform tension and the perfect fitting of the teeth. When a saw snakes or runs in or out of the log it is often due to the fact that it has not been perfectly tensioned, or the teeth not properly swaged and dressed. A band saw improperly tensioned, or teeth improperly fitted, will run in or out every time, therefore too much care cannot be taken when tensioning or when fitting the teeth. A poorly-tensioned saw will not strain up evenly on the wheels, and, if run very long that way will probably break.
