ead of an Ruskindly for the of their lot and in the justness myself before. should become joicing to hear wretched; they to work as we a slavery worse tertained some but a dull repght the former it when I came ound the world fear lest there , my barn, preadduced quite Why should I as before? He other education ie a good farm, and no kind of perfectly reconouse all at once my and solitary orked with more vork for myself ould often come he shady trees, docility of my thing light and before. I felt s that situation licity, than that tion, freedom of equires but little o my country, a small tribute to government, with loyalty and due respect; I know no other landlord, than the Lord of all land, to whom I owe the most sincere gratitude. My father left me three hundred and seventy-one acres of land, forty-seven of which are good timothy meadow, an excellent orchard, a good house, and a substantial barn. It is my duty to think how happy I am, that he lived to build and to pay for all these improvements; what are the labours which I have to undergo, what are my fatigues when compared to his, who had every thing to do, from the first tree he felled, to the finishing of his house? Every year I kill from 1500 to 2000 weight of pork, 1200 of beef, half a dozen of good wethers in harvest: of fowls my wife has always a great flock: what can I with more? My negroes are tolerably faithful and healthy; by a long series of industry and honest dealings, my father left behind him the name of a good man; I have but to tread his paths to be happy and a good man like him. I know enough of the law to regulate my little concerns with propriety, nor do I dread its power; these are the grand outlines of my situation, but as I can feel much more than I am able to express, I hardly know how to proceed. When my first son was born, the whole train of my ideas was altered; never was there a charm that acted so quickly and so powerfully; I ceased to ramble in imagination through the wide world: my excursions since have not exceeded the bounds of my farm, and all my principal pleasures are now centred within its scanty limits: but, at the same time, there is not an operation belonging to it, in which I do not find some food for useful reflexions. This is the reason I suppose, that when you was here, you used, in your refined stile, to denominate me the farmer of feelings; how rude must those feelings be in him who daily holds the axe or the plough! how much more refined on the contrary those of the European, whose mind is improved by education, example, books, and by every acquired advantage! Those feelings, however, I will delineate as well as I can, agreeably to your earnest request. When I contemplate my wife, by my fireside, while she either spins, knits, darns, or surkles our child, I cannot describe the various emotions of love, of gratitude, of conscious pride, which thrill in my heart, and often overflow in involuntary tears. I feel the