WILLIAMS PIANOS

EIGHTEENTH YEAR

IT'S STILL A MYSTERY.

Inspector Murray Is Now Trying to Lift the Veil

SURROUNDING THE MURDER OF MRS. ORR.

The Detective Keeps Young Allison in the Sweat-Box for Hours.

What the Boy Divulged is Not Yet Known, But Trevelyan, the Medical Student, was Discharged From Custody—Another Man's Name Comes Prominently Into the Case—Said to Have Been Identified by the Hired Boy—The Serious Theories Discussed—Strange Letter Written by Harry Blair of Galt to the Woman, Showing Their Peculiar Relations—The Inquest to Be Resumed To-day.

Galt, Ont., Aug. 17.—(Special to The World).—The work of unravelling the mystery that surrounds the murder of Mrs. Anthony Orr is proceeding slowly but surely, and there is every prospect that the murderer will have to face a jury. Detective Murray put in a hard day's work. At 9 o'clock he went to the Town Hall, and it was not until 3 o'clock that he came away. All this time was consumed in questioning Trevelyan and Allison, the only persons yet arrested in connection with the murder. Trevelyan was discharged from custody before he went into the sweat box, as Detective Murray quickly concluded that his arrest was a mistake. Allison is still in custody. When the trio emerged from the sweat box The World representative interviewed Trevelyan, but apart from the information that many important facts had been brought out by the detective's questioning he would say nothing about what transpired. He had been told not to say anything, and he positively refused to give any further information.

Murray Views the Scene.

In the afternoon Detective Murray visited the scene of the tragedy, inspected the graves and the premises generally, and had a talk with Anthony Orr and the little Maggie Orr. He was shown the red oak club returned to him in The World, and is satisfied that it is the instrument that killed Mrs. Orr. A close examination of this stick reveals several blood stains, and it is of such shape and weight as to convince the authorities that they have now the instrument of death in their possession.

Theories Are Numerous.

Theories innumerable fill the air, and a new one is born every minute, but the actual happenings to-day are these: The arrival of High Constable Khipert from Berlin, who will assist Detective Murray in this case.

Does Allison Know More?

Whether Allison actually committed the deed himself or not, the general impression is that he knows a good deal more about it than he has told. The finding of his gun hidden in the barn, and the fact that he has been seen in the neighborhood as a farm laborer. He had at one time been employed by the Walters, who live near the Orr farm, and it is said that he had visited the Orr farm on several occasions. Stoker's home is in Kirkwall, about 10 miles from here, and William R. Bond, a resident of Galt, says he met Stoker on the day of the tragedy walking along the road, but whether it was near the Orr farm or not that he met him he cannot say, as he had driven both east and west of Galt. Stoker is now working for a farmer near the town. It was he who went to the Orr farm after Mrs. Orr disappeared and offered his services as a detective. He is said to be a man who could be counted on in three days. Stoker represented himself as a detective from Buffalo. It is impossible to say about seeing Stoker or a man who looked like Stoker in the lane that morning. Trevelyan went through the streets this afternoon a free man, but will be a witness at the trial. The case is a most interesting and perplexing one, but it seems impossible that a solution will not be found. The inquest will be resumed to-morrow at 11 o'clock.

Blair's Letter to Mrs. Orr.

The letter from Harry Blair to Mrs. Orr, dated June 6, 1896, is in possession of the authorities, and reads as follows: I now drop you a few lines to let you know that I have been asked to write this letter to you. I have been asked to do so by the High Constable Khipert, who is in possession of your letter to me. I have read it, and I am sorry to hear that you are in such a state of mind. I have been thinking of you very much lately, and I hope that you are getting on better. I have been thinking of you very much lately, and I hope that you are getting on better. I have been thinking of you very much lately, and I hope that you are getting on better.

Was the Club Washed?

Detective Murray says that as a detective had been made to wash the blood off the red oak stick. He thinks the stick was washed in the trough near the house and it was not burned because the murderer did not time enough to chop it up and put it in the fire. Tonight the theory that Allison did the deed is gaining ground.

A Talk With Blair.

The second theory connects Harry Blair with the tragedy. The World reporter had a talk with Blair in his shop this morning, and after some persuasion, succeeded in getting him to give an account of his movements on the morning of the tragedy. Blair says that he was at the railway station at 7 o'clock that morning, and that after leaving the station he did some work around his house, and at 8 o'clock was at his son's tea store. Between 8 and 10 o'clock he states that he delivered some tea for his son, but refused to say to whom he had delivered it. He also claims that he went out for a drive with his son and grandchild during this time, and that he did not start for his farm until about 10:40, arriving there about 11 o'clock, with the roast of beef, which he had purchased at Gill's butcher shop at 8:15.

In Conflict With Roddy.

It will be remembered that Milkman Roddy stated that he saw Blair driving towards the Orr farm at 8:30 that morning. The importance of Blair's statement of his movements is therefore obvious. At the time Roddy claims to have seen him driving towards the Orr farm Blair says he was in Galt delivering tea for his son. Blair's statement that he left for Orr's about 10:40 is corroborated by John Gerran, an employee of Blair's, who says he met him opposite Dr. McKendrick's residence about 10:30. The two representatives investigated those statements very carefully, and was convinced that they were true. If Blair did not reach the Orr farm until 11 o'clock he had nothing to do with the tragedy, and the only way with it is to surmise that he was at the farm at 8:30, drove back to Galt after the tragedy and returned to the farm at 11 o'clock.

Blair is Worried.

When giving The World representative a statement of his movements Blair did not relate events in the same sequence when asked to repeat his story, but he is so terribly worried over the unwelcome prominence that has been thrust upon him in connection with this tragedy that he is unable to give a clear and simple account of his movements and what he has done since that morning.

Who Was the Man?

A feature in the case that is interesting is that on Monday morning Mrs. Orr told her husband that he had better not go away that morning, to stay at home and out the oats. He replied that there was a heavy dew on the grass, and he would be home in a few hours and cut them. Mr. Orr believes that she did not wish to be left alone and that she had a premonition of danger. She had been very badly frightened a few nights before by some man who had jumped out of the willows while she was driving in the lane at a point where the supposed grave was discovered. Who was the man who jumped out and frightened her? Was it Robert Stoker, whose name is connected with the third theory? Allison's father says that his son identified Stoker as the man whom he met in the lane on the morning of the tragedy. Stoker is a carpenter by trade, but is frequently employed in different parts of the neighborhood as a farm laborer. He had at one time been employed by the Walters, who live near the Orr farm, and it is said that he had visited the Orr farm on several occasions. Stoker's home is in Kirkwall, about 10 miles from here, and William R. Bond, a resident of Galt, says he met Stoker on the day of the tragedy walking along the road, but whether it was near the Orr farm or not that he met him he cannot say, as he had driven both east and west of Galt. Stoker is now working for a farmer near the town. It was he who went to the Orr farm after Mrs. Orr disappeared and offered his services as a detective. He is said to be a man who could be counted on in three days. Stoker represented himself as a detective from Buffalo. It is impossible to say about seeing Stoker or a man who looked like Stoker in the lane that morning. Trevelyan went through the streets this afternoon a free man, but will be a witness at the trial. JOHN M. ELLIOTT OF LONDON

Fell to the Bottom of a Ravine in Manitoba and Was Killed—Farm Laborer Killed by Lightning.

Winnipeg, Aug. 17.—(Special).—At Moose Jaw yesterday the body of a young man was found at the bottom of a ravine. He had been killed by the fall. Papers on his person indicate that he is John M. Elliott, an implement man from London, Ont. Winnipeg City Council, in a streak of economy, has dismissed the assistant clerk, veterinary inspector, health inspector and half a dozen other civic officials. James McGregor, a Winnipeg pioneer, is dead. He was well known in London and Sarina. Vice-President Shaughnessy of the C.P.R. left here to-day to inspect the work on the Crow's Nest Pass Road. Manager Whyte accompanied him.

One Man's Confidence.

If men hadn't the biggest kind of confidence in Toronto's future—and their ability to do the biggest and best things in the world—Toronto—yes, Canada—it would have been a risky investment to put so much money in a business that has been so long in being created at Temperance and Yonge streets—about twenty-five years in business—by the late Mr. J. H. McLeod, and then and is proof that they have a fast hold on the best trade in the city and they mean to keep it. The new building, which is being erected at the corner of the two streets, is a fine example of modern architecture. The new house is coming along on the gallop and Oct. 1 will see the new building in the hands of the public. The new building will be a fine example of modern architecture. The new building will be a fine example of modern architecture.

Aids Dispenser Wonderfully—Adams' Tuffi Fruit.

See that the trade mark name, Tuffi Fruit, is on each five cent package. It is a fine example of modern architecture. The new building will be a fine example of modern architecture.

The Alpine Dairy Company.

241 Weller-street, Toronto, Ont. I have this day examined the premises of the Alpine Dairy Co., corner of Yonge and Isabella-streets, Toronto, with reference to the regular export of milk to the city of Toronto, and I find that the same is being produced in a sanitary and healthy manner. The premises are clean and well kept, and the milk is of a fine quality. I find that the same is being produced in a sanitary and healthy manner.

Lacrosse Excursion to Ottawa.

The Canadian Pacific Railway Co. will run a very cheap trip from Toronto to Ottawa on the regular evening train on Friday and the morning train of Saturday next. The round trip rate has been placed at $4.00, and the ticket will be good to return any day up to Thursday, Aug. 20. The occasion of the cheap trip is the championship lacrosse game between Toronto and the Capitals at Ottawa, which is creating a great deal of interest.

Father's Turkish Baths.

661 Bath and Bed St. 127 Yonge. Will receive some of our specialties: cool shirts, in taffetas, underwear, fleece dressing jackets and slippers, etc. We have a large stock of these goods, and we are prepared to receive orders for them. We are prepared to receive orders for them.

Toronto's Distinguished Visitors.

Patrick G. Alexander, who says he is a Russian, arrived at the Queen Hotel last night, and was solicited to be interviewed by the newspaper men of Toronto. He claims to be a general newspaper correspondent, and to speak 14 different languages. He also stated that he has travelled all over the world, and when he seriously assured The World's young man that he received $50,000 a year for his newspaper work, The World representative declined to interview any further.
