Canon Cody delivered a dedicatory pray-cr. The fact that the school was at present trajoying the most influential year of its history was elicited from the headmas-ter's address. There were at present in attendance 320 students, Dr. MacDonald stated, and he quoted statistics showing the maintenance thruout the college of the highest standard in academic work and athletics. He referred to the diffi-culties of the past two years which had been spent in Knox College, and paid highest tribute, to the co-operation af-forded by the Knox staff and students, and the St. Andrew's College staff and students, in meeting the problems incl-dental to the cramped quarters. He stressed the loss which the college had sustained during the past year in the death of Dr. H. J. Hamilton and Mr. Z. A. Lash, two members, the head-master stated, had given indefatigable service to the institution, and to the lated doctor particularly belonged credit for the remarkable freedom from filmess which students of the college had enjoy-ed. The six o'clock rendezvous at the King Edward Hotel was a repetition of the pleasant exchanges of good fellowship which marked that of the opening event. The geniai chairman, Rev. W. A. Cameron, presided, and introduced the host of the evening, Frank O'Connor, of the Laura Secord, who defrayed the expense of the dinner to the captains and other campaigners. "The man who was our host last night," said the chairman, "was a Catholk. Who says we've not got federation?" asked the chairman. In repsonse a perfect roar of cheers went up from the company, and cries of "Who's all right?" and the answer, "Frank O'Connor," the recipient of the tribute of popularity being forced to risc and bow his acknowledgements, while extra cheers and a tiger were poured out upon him.

The Morning Session.

The Morning Session. At the morning sitting Mr. Tye made the important statement that new lines as a rule created new traffic, but de-clared that the steam lines now operat-ing between Niagara and Toromto cosid handle all the traffic between these points, and remarked that he was only expressing his opinion on freight mat-ters since all his experience had been with the engineering side of construc-tion, and he had never been connected with the traffic department. Witness spent most of the morning in controverting the evidence given recent-ly by W. S. Murray, contrary to whose opinion Mr. Tye advocated the electrifi-cation of the existing steam roads as soon as economic conditions would per-mit and strongly condemned the build-ing of a new road. He admitted, under cross-examination, that the primary function of steam trains could pass each other, and follow each other, more frequently owing to more efficient con-trol.
