"Chu Chin Chow" Success.

Magnificent scenery, gorgeous costumes, a series of wonderful pictures of oriental life, a vast pageant, including three hundred people, and music with dancing that spoke of the rich romantic east of a thousand years ago, characterized the presentation of the great spectacle drama, "Chu Chin Chow," at the Royal Alexandra last night. The scenes were laid in Arabian Nights land, the audience having an open sesame to the famous treasure cave of Ali Baba, and the Forty Thieves. Some of the seens are laid in the ancient city of Bagdad, others in the rich palace of Bagdad, others in the rich palace of Abu Hasan, robber of mankind, who appears in Bagdad as a Chinese mandarin, Chu Chin Chow, gave a robust interpretation to a somewhat melodramatic role, and Miss Marjorie Wood brought real histrionic talent and vivid personality to her role of Strictly feature yaudeville and stri ever, now that the ordeal of an opening night in a big theatre is over, the performance for the balance of the week will probably run more smoothly. Supporting Mr. Tellegen is a capable company of artists, who make the most of their respective characters. Fate, philosophy and comedy in mild doses are said to be blended in "Blind Youth," which is probably true, but if some of the characters did not speak in broken French-English, the combination would have been better understood. But then, again, on the other hand, there is the atmosphere of the piece to consider, for it has its genesis in a studio in the Latin quarter in Paris, and its finish in New York. "Blind Youth" is well staged. The contrasting studio effects are good, and the gowns of the ladies marvels of the swell staged.
