TORONTO CARPENTER ARRESTED FOR BRUTAL ASSAULT ON A WOMAN

Toronto, Nov. 20.—With the arrest of Percy Kemp, a carpenter, of 270 Avenue road, by four detectives, in a Mutual street boarding house, the five day search for the assailant of Mrs. C. Cecilia Schick, 29 Rainsford road, ended this morning. Since Friday morning, when the woman straggled into a neighboring house, bleeding from terrible wounds inflicted by a broken axe handle, the police have been working to locate her brutal assailant and it was feared he had managed to escape from the city.

Kemp took his arrest coolly and finished the breakfast he was eating when the officers entered. Taken to headquarters he resolutely refused to make any statement except to his counsel.

SOCIETY OF LONDON AND CONTINENT

Unconventional Princess of Pless Not in Favor of The Kaiser

SKATING IS POPULAR

A Society Lady's Care For Supposed Poor and How She Was Imposed on—Wedding of Daughter of Earl Grey This Month

(Times Special Correspondence)

London, Nov. 9.—Princess Pless does not shake off the delirium that the severe illness after the birth of her second boy left with her, and she will spend most of the winter on the Riviera, as she did last year. She has taken a pretty villa just outside La Napoule, which is within an hour's run from Cannes, and as soon as the hunting parties which she and her husband always entertain at this time of the year, are over, she will go south.

Princess Pless is master of the hounds to the Kaiser, and every year on St. Hubert's Day—the patron saint of the huntmen and dogs—he entertains the emperor at Furstenstein. Some years ago, the princess, who is a thorough "madcap," introduced at these hunting parties, after the hunt and proper Kaiser has taken his leave, of course, a new frock that has become immensely popular with her guests. After dinner, they go for long drives into the thick forests that surround the castle, emerging now and then from the blackness of the trees to a road lit on each side by flaming torches.

Princess Pless always leaves huge sighs of relief when the unrelenting back of her German overcoat is turned on the castle. Her unconventional ways find no favor at all with William, and she has to restrain herself a little when playing with her light job for her. Some one once indignantly spoke of the princess to the Kaiser, asking him if he did not agree that she was an extraordinarily beautiful woman.

"Very beautiful, no doubt," was the guarded reply, "but not womanly."

The princess will have her secret, the Duchess of Westminster, staying with her in the south of France.

Great were the rejoicings over the reopening of the Olympia Skating Club recently at Holland Park. There never is much going on during the "holidays" of course, but this year there is less than ever. Troublesome times, both at home in Holland Park, and the owner of a dainty foot and ankle does not lengthen her skirt more than she can help.

There is more elaborate skating to be seen at Prince's of course, where the fops disport themselves on real ice. Three duchesses were to be seen there lately—Her Grace of Bedford, who started the place, and the wearers of the Portland and the Westminster strawberry leaves. Of the men the Earl of Rockingham, with his mid-Victorian side whiskers, is the most regular skater; indeed, these dull days, he may generally be seen at the rink.

Among the most enthusiastic skaters are the two princesses, who are settled in England, the Countess of Zin and Nada. Rarely do they go to the rink, but they do come up from Ken Wood, at Hampstead, to have a spin at Holland Park and they are always several names deep for partners for the turtles. They are both tall and graceful, and certainly the present fashion could not be more suitable for skating. The sparseness of the make of clothes shows a pretty figure to its greatest advantage, and the owner of a dainty foot and ankle does not lengthen her skirt more than she can help.

Lady Anstey, whose charities among her poorer neighbors are so well known, told an amusing story the other day of two women who succeeded in "freezing" her several years before she found them out. They were a mother and daughter to whom she had sent presents and clothes regularly for several years, believing them to be terribly poor. One day the daughter wrote a more than usually piteous letter saying she had been ill, and would so much like a little wine. Lady Anstey, therefore, sent her a bottle of port. More letters from the women, however, aroused Lady Anstey's suspicions, so she requested the Charity Organization Society to investigate their case, and they reported that the women were poor, but that the daughter was not so.

They received no more wine after that, though Her Ladyship M.C. continued to send them other presents. The daughter died, and then the mother, and after the latter's death, there were found in the house three trunks full of clothes—most of them Lady Anstey's, another full of household linen and sums of money amounting to $200.

Fashion's Latest.

Fashion's latest is that women should carry walking sticks in the streets. A woman with a walking stick generally carries a picture of a figure skater in her pocket, and the stick is a very different affair. Made of ornamental wood, or, for the wealthy, of tortoiseshell, with elaborately carved or jeweled ends, it is a most graceful and useful accessory to the wardrobe.

BOSTON PAPER PRAISES PLAY

St. John Assured of Dramatic Treat in Opera House Tomorrow and Saturday

That A Butterfly on the Wheel has proved so successful is due to the main to the fact that one of the authors, Frances Nelson, now a member of parliament was formerly an actor, then a writer, then a dramatist, and then a politician. The collaborator, Edward G. Hemmings, is a fine one, the leading characters being splendidly presented, and the costuming rich and elaborate. A big audience should witness this fine play on its final presentation at the Shubert Theatre tonight.

The extraordinary dramatic triumph will be seen at the Opera House tomorrow evening and Saturday afternoon and evening.

AMUSEMENTS IN ST. JOHN: WHAT THE PLAYHOUSES OFFER

CARLETON'S NEW THEATRE.

The new picture theatre in Carleton, to be called The Empress, will be opened on Monday at 8.45 o'clock p.m. It was thought it might be possible to open tonight, but unforeseen delays in the new fittings has made postponement necessary.

The lower hall of the large City Hall building has been literally transformed. The floor has been graded, new lighting installed, picture curtain hung, modern operating booth erected, a brand new Underwriter's Model Edison motion picture machine put in position, an adequate heating plant provided, new chairs placed in convenient arrangement and floor coverings laid.

The new place will be warm, clean and easy of access and exit. The large doors have been changed to swing outwards, railings put up and draperies hung. Manager Smith proposes to make the Empress a home picture parlor for the Carleton people the year round, winterport rushes and other business influences will not be considered of paramount importance.

The first consideration will always be a good clean, new programme for the West Side family folks. Pictures will be "first-run" service, not second-hand, and will therefore be new to all parts of the city.

The prices of admission will be five cents for about 275 seats, and ten cents for a special reservation of about 100 chairs.

The outlay in making the Empress ready for a proper show has been considerable.

Of all the features the Nickel has presented of a sporting character the present attraction—the Olympic Sports at Stockholm, Sweden, 1912—is by long odds the most interesting and delightful. To be transported from this familiar Canadian city to the strange and most engaging Swedish capital, there to see the very flower of the world's athletes vying with one another for the classical laurel wreath of the ancient Greek sporting contests, as well as events of international popularity, is the sensation, and indeed the actual photographic process the watcher enjoys.

Nothing ever shown in the Nickel has surpassed this three-reel film by the Brothers in photographic clarity and detail. It is as near perfect as it might be possible to be. Each and every detail of the great world's most of runners, jumpers, divers, swimmers, cyclists, gymnasts, and all lines of sports, is caught by the unerring eye of the motion picture camera and all the events are reproduced as if the watcher were enjoying a special box seat in the gigantic stadium.

Hundreds of thousands of people are watching the sports and these with the royal visitors always in evidence, make a brilliant setting for the field of contest. The most interesting part of the whole $300 feet of film was perhaps the action depicting the fancy marching of the various national contingents, and the various nations, divers, swimmers, cyclists, gymnasts, and all lines of sports, is caught by the unerring eye of the motion picture camera and all the events are reproduced as if the watcher were enjoying a special box seat in the gigantic stadium.

FINE BILL AT GEM

As had been fully expected, the programme given for the reopening of the Gem Theatre yesterday afforded pleasure to the great number who attended, and the feature production of "Monte Christo" in three reels by the Selig Company was particularly enjoyed. It was a magnificent presentation, beautifully staged and the acting was superior to the average standard in motion picture productions. De- dard in motion picture productions. De- dard in motion picture productions. De- dard in motion picture productions.

While the other roles were handled with ability and cleverness as well. Careful attention was given to every little detail, and the presentation will long be remembered by those who witnessed it. It was a pleasure to all present to note the greater accommodation provided in the enlargement of the theatre, as there was practically twice as much seating room as formerly, a fact which was commented upon most favorably. The music last evening was distinctly artistic, and the programme by the increased orchestra was delightful, as was the singing of Miss Holcombe. The rural comedy, "Spoon Sam," brought many laughs and made up a well balanced show.
