The terrific wind gave the salling yacht a hard time and the launch and row-boat reached the derelict and its frantic occupants first. The launch took off the ladies of the party and the row-boat the children and both boats necessary before land was regained. In the meantime the sailing yacht was nowhere to be seen. Then the storm abated and not until then was the yacht located. It was sighted, dismantled and crippled, more than three miles from land, drifting swiftly out to sea. The launch was again requisitioned and would-be rescuers were rescued themselves, the yacht being With his wife he was in a hammock caught four miles from land, and tow- under a tree when the bolt struck him.
