

DOING NOBLY FOR PATRIOTIC FUND

Monday, Oct. 5. During the week-end the local patriotic fund passed the $36,000 mark. A fine contribution of $1,000 from the St. John Railway Co. was the chief cause of the rapid increase. Other contributions on Saturday were: E. T. P. Sheehan, $5; Ladies' Auxiliary, $5; M. Moncton, $4; R. D. Thompson, $3; Isaac W. Daniel (second contribution), $2; S. W. Williams, $2; W. D. Baskin, $1; Chas. G. Brown, $1; Mrs. H. S. Bridges, $5.

Parish of Lancaster No. 2. John McCavour $2, Wm. H. Cunningham $2, Wm. J. Cunningham $1, James Knox $2, Elvin Knox $2, Robert Knox $2, Mrs. David McCavour $1, Samuel McCavour $1, James McAfee $1, Wesley Cunningham $2, Mrs. James Ferguson $2, Mrs. Thomas Wilson $1, Joe Galbraith $1, Mrs. Samuel Ferguson $1, Mrs. James McCavour $1, Mr. Richard Evans $1, Mrs. Mary Wells $2, Wm. J. McCavour $2, John Macgillivray $2, Mrs. Miller $2, Walter G. Evans $1, Thos. Cunningham $2, Friend $2, Friend $2, Nat. Maguire $1, Friend $2, Friend $2, Harvey Evans $1, William Stearns $1, Hamn $1, J. Grundmark $1, David Evans $1, W. T. Penny $2, Willie Downey $1, John Ferguson $1, Robert Ferguson $2, James Reid $1, Samuel Reid $2, Friend $2, M. K. Galbraith $1, Geo. H. Galbraith $2, Mrs. Wallace Galbraith $2, J. J. Galbraith $1, Harry Galbraith $1, James Reid $1, Alexander McAllister $1, William McAllister $1, Robt. J. McKee $1, W. J. Galbraith $1, W. T. Galbraith $1, S. F. Galbraith $2, William McAllister $1, Milford McAllister $1, Samuel Reid $1, S. Evans $1, Thos. Evans $2, Ed. A. Galbraith $1, Edmund Wilson $2, H. E. Galbraith $1, Geo. Dalzell $1, Stephen McAllister $1, T. J. Galbraith $1, W. J. Wilson $1, S. H. Wenn $1, Albert Wilson $2, Thos. Galbraith $2, Herbert Galbraith $1, Walter Wilson $2, James Wilson $2, Thomas Wilson $1, Mary Evans $1, George Ferguson $1, Samuel Wilson $2, Mrs. John Wilson $1, William Wilson $1, Wm. J. Evans $1, John Galbraith $1, Andy Galbraith $2, George Wilson $1, Friend $2, Robert Baird $1, Andy Wilson $1, Friend $2, Miss Sadie Odell $2, Friend $2, Friend $2, Jas. H. Galbraith $1, total $72.

Grand Manan Contributions. Grand Manan, Sept. 30.—Contributions towards the Grand Manan patriotic fund are coming in fast. Miss Eva Harvey is treasurer and Miss Ida Russell secretary. The following subscriptions have been paid: John Cronk, $2; Neil Guptill, $1; Albert Wooster, $2; Millicent Randall, $2; A. Friend, $2; Howard Wooster, $1; Quin Wilson, $1; Will Smith, $2; Ed. Green, $1; Mrs. Will Cronk, $1; Eva Brown, $2; Maurice Plant, $1; Grant Dakin, $2; Mrs. John Randall, $2; Ruth Wood, $1; John Wood, $1; Edwin Green, $2; Julia Dakin, $2; George Gardner, $1; A. Friend, $2; Dr. E. F. Johnson, $5; Mrs. Geo. Brown, $1; Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Johnson, $1; Ed. Young, $1; Ingalls, $2; Edward Wilson, $1; Augustus O'Neil, $2; Miss MacGregor, $2; Ida Russell, $5; D. H. Duggett, $1; Dustin Brown, $2; A. Friend, $2; Herbert Duggett, $2; Mrs. Fred McDonald, $2; Mrs. Leonard Foster, $2; Mrs. Mason, $2; Simeon Guptill, $1; Wesley Ingalls, $1; John Cook, $2; Willard Ingalls, $1; William Brown, $1; James Brown, $2; Mr. and Mrs. Scott D. Guptill, $1, total $1,000.

Newcastle to Start a Patriotic Fund. Newcastle, Oct. 5.—A public meeting was held last night to organize a local branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund. Mayor Morrissey presided and explained the purpose and constitution of the society. Mayor Morrissey explained that a soldier's wife with three children would receive $45 a month, $20 from the government and $25 from the fund. An English reservist's family would receive $17.10 from British government and $27.90 from the fund. One woman of Newcastle, whose husband had gone to the front, had been already helped from the general relief fund lately raised by the committee directly from the war, by loss of employment, high prices, etc. could not draw from the C. P. F. There would have to be some form of relief. Such fund was already in existence. The meeting adjourned till Friday evening, Oct. 9, at 8 o'clock, in Town Hall, for election of officers and further organization.

Novia Scotia County Votes $1,500. Digby, Oct. 1.—At a special meeting of the council for the municipality of Digby, it was decided to contribute the sum of $1,500 to the patriotic fund and to assess the same on the municipality.

Hampton Gives to Belgian Relief Fund. Thirteen packing cases of food and clothing were shipped on Saturday from Hampton to the Belgian Relief Fund. The following ladies and gentlemen contributing: Mrs. Hutchings, Mrs. A. Dickson, Mrs. Jane Smith, Mrs. W. H. Rowan, Miss McMillan, Mrs. James Snodgrass, Mrs. W. G. Land, Mrs. J. C. Mortimer, Mrs. W. Robinson, Miss Minnie Robertson, Mrs. R. G. Flewelling, Mrs. A. H. Chipman, Miss Frances Fairweather, Mrs. Travis, Mrs. C. J. Menester, Miss Carrie Smith, Mrs. Lyon Barnes, Miss Lennal McDonald, Mrs. Arthur Sharpe, Mrs. Frank Spence, Mrs. Joseph McNamee, Miss Carrie, Miss M. O'By, Mrs. Isaac Campbell, Mrs. J. E. Angeline, Mrs. E. H. Creed, Mrs. Coallie, Mrs. Florrie Smith, Mrs. A. B. Smith, Mrs. N. M. Barnes, Mrs. J. Wm. Smith, Misses Duke, Mrs. H. Smith, Mrs. John Frost, Mrs. W. H. Rowan, Miss Millidge Walker, Mrs. John McAvity, Mrs. Cummings, Mrs. Truman Alward, Mrs. S. Wm. Barnes, Mrs. J. Ryan, Mrs. John Vanhau, Mrs. George Langstroth, Mrs. Cecil Archer, Mrs. Geraldine, Mrs. G. McCurdy, Mrs. F. M. Humphrey, Mrs. G. M. Wilson, Mrs. H. H. Scoville, Miss Edna Smith, Mrs. H. J. Fowler, Mrs. Wm. R. Brown, Mrs. A. Schofield, G. & G. Flewelling Manufacturing Co., R. H. Smith, Lewis French Mercantile Co., A. B. Smith's, J. Wm. Smith, Chief Justice McLeod, Dr. Wainford, Dr. Wainmore, Dr. Smith, Mr. Harry Cowan and Mr. Otty Barnes.

P. E. I. CAR FERRY. London, Oct. 4.—Hon. George H. Percy and Mrs. Percy went to Newcastle-On-Lyne yesterday in order to attend the launching of the new Prince Edward Island ferry steamer on Monday. The steamer has been built by the Armstrong Whitworth Company. In their capacity of directors of the P. E. I. Car Ferry Company, they will also be present at the launching.

ANDOVER AND PERTH RED CROSS BRANCH. Andover, N. B., Sept. 29.—As a result of a letter received by James McPhillip, Perth, from Lady Tilley, a meeting of the ladies of Perth and Andover was held in the court house on Monday evening and a Red Cross branch organized. Miss Besie Kilburn secretary, and Mrs. A. E. Kuppke treasurer, Mrs. Jas. Tibbitts was elected honorary president, Mrs. G. B. Peat and Mrs. Percy for Andover; Mrs. Douglas Baird and Mrs. Hefferon for Perth. The meeting was held once a week at the court house, the first meeting on Wednesday.

Twenty Years in Dorchester. Twenty years in Dorchester penitentiary is the price which John H. Branan must pay for the shooting of Policeman Frank E. O'Leary, for which he was recently convicted on a charge of manslaughter. In addition he is yet to be sentenced for robbery charges for which his accomplice is now serving a term of seven years in Dorchester. It is possible, however, that the sentences may run concurrently. John H. Branan will enter Dorchester penitentiary some day early this week to begin his twenty years sentence for the shooting of Policeman Frank E. O'Leary. It is all probability he will leave on Tuesday.

40,000 FIRE IN CENTREVILLE. Fire caused serious loss in the village of Centreville, Carleton county, on Wednesday evening. It broke out in a dwelling house owned by Rev. George Beckwith, and occupied by men working on the Van der Veer farm. The fire spread to another house owned and occupied by Mr. Beckwith himself. Butta's hotel, a good-sized building, was soon in flames, also the hardware store, Deane's hardware and blacksmith shop of Deane Clark, all of which were completely destroyed, with the greater part of the contents. The Bank of Nova Scotia had a branch office in Merston, Delone Clark's building and of course, was burned out. W. T. Baldwin is the manager. It looked at one time as if the village might be destroyed, but by the good work of the firemen and the people generally the fire was confined to the houses mentioned.

$15,000 FIRE IN CENTREVILLE. I. C. R. FREIGHT SHED, MONCTON. Moncton, Oct. 1.—The I. C. R. freight shed here was badly damaged by fire which started about 6 o'clock this evening. The shed was badly gutted and freight damaged. The loss by fire and loss being estimated at $15,000. The origin of the fire is mysterious, and it is understood the I. C. R. will hold an investigation.

HAMPTON WILL ASSIST BELGIAN RELIEF WORK

Hampton, N. B., Oct. 1.—(Special)—At a large and highly representative meeting of the residents of Hampton at the court house this evening, E. A. Schofield in the chair, and Frank S. Compton secretary, it was decided to assist the Belgian relief fund by money raised by the committee on the afternoon and evening of Thanksgiving day, Oct. 12, and it was also decided to request the warden of the court house to convene a session of the municipal council at an early date for the purpose of making a substantial grant to the patriotic fund and the Belgian relief fund, for which money and goods are urgently needed. Committees were struck to carry out the plans suggested, who are to report at an adjourned meeting to be held at the same place on Saturday evening of this week, at 8 o'clock.

Campbellton to Organize. Campbellton, N. B., Oct. 2.—An enthusiastic patriotic meeting was held this evening in the council chamber of the town. Mayor A. A. Andrews was called to the chair and addressing the citizens including Judge McLatchy, D. A. Stewart, Rev. J. E. Purdy, Charles Young, W. L. Harvey, Mrs. W. L. Harvey, $100; Elsie M. Harvey, $100; Samuel Harvey, $100; Louise H. Harvey, $100; Laurier Harvey, $100.

ELMER WARD, OF CHIPMAN, KILLED ON VALLEY ROAD. Fredericton, N. B., Oct. 3.—Elmer Ward, of Chipman, aged twenty-three, brakeman on the Valley Railway, was crushed between two cars at Barony last night. He was brought to the Victoria Hospital here, but died after a few hours. The body was taken to Chipman this morning.

PORT ELGIN FAIR THE BEST YET. Sackville, N. B., Oct. 2.—Perhaps the most successful history of the Westmorland & Botsford Agricultural Society was held at Port Elgin yesterday. Fine weather adding much to its success. From all parts of the county people flocked to the fair, and the exhibits which were there in abundance. Expert judges were on hand and found considerable merit in their work of allocating the prizes. The exhibition was very keen. Great rivalry, although friendly, existed between the exhibitors, which went to show that the farmers of that district are heartily in sympathy with their annual fair.

ALLIES BENDING GERMAN WING. Capt. C. Weldon McLean, son of Col. H. H. McLean, an officer of the regular British Army of India, who came home to England when war broke out, and by the British was taken to the Canadian Home Artillery.

BARN BURIED AND BRUSH BLAZING AT BLINDMAN'S LAKE. Monday, Oct. 5. A fierce fire, the reflection of which could be seen from the city, and for miles around in all directions, burst out last night about 8:30 o'clock on the property of Alexander Clark, on the Loch Lomond Road, near Blindman's Lake. It raged until midnight, but owing to the fact that the telephone communication was interrupted by the fire no information could be reached regarding it after 10:15 o'clock.

Part of Valley Railway Ready Last of Month. Fredericton, Oct. 2.—The St. John & Quebec Railway Company have hoped to have the St. John Valley Railway from Gagetown to Centreville ready to be taken over by the I. C. R. on Oct. 15. S. B. Wass, the chief engineer of the road, said this morning, however, that there was some doubt as to whether the road would be entirely ready for operation on that date, but that it would be before the last of the present month.

BRITAIN WANTS TO BUY $500,000 AMERICAN SWEATERS. Philadelphia, Oct. 5.—Agents of the British government it was reported here today, are securing bids from local knit goods manufacturers for 500,000 sweaters, similar to those recently furnished the United States Army. Yarn dealers have been asked to quote figures for the necessary yarns.

With Canadian Force

Graves of Brave Northern France. Grim Scenes in Wake of Armies as Great Battle Goes On. ONE GREAT CEMETERY. Corps of Old Men Engaged in Gruesome Task of Burying Bodies, While Women Follow and Plant Willow Crosses for Officers—How Gravedigger Slew Uhlman—An Unnatural Confirre of Burning Bodies.

(News of the World, Sept. 26). Over the fair fields of France where lately the Germans marched and still more lately retreated, grim scenes are now being enacted from day to day. Thousands and thousands of bodies await the last services of the living, and these are now being given them as rapidly as an army corps of grave diggers can fulfil the duty. Day after day and night after night this army of old men apply themselves to their dreary task. Their work is followed behind bearing little bundles of poles, willow twigs and strands of wire. They cut a few inches from each wand and bind it on crosswise with the wire. And whenever an officer is found cold and stiff amid the huddle of the dead a cross of willow wand is planted over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flicker and go out. The dawn stalks up out of the east, not softly, as the sunbeams of dawn and arrive to set the fairies dancing back across the glades to their daytime hiding places— not softly but with a jagged frown across heaven's brow, and the thunder of guns far away marking the passage of the hours. Then come the piled ranks of corpses careering overhead at the command of a relentless southwest wind, become whirring blades had from night over his grave. Hours and hours every night the women ply their harrowing trade, weary and wan, marking cemetery after cemetery. Their bundles of sticks diminish as this acreage of the dead swells. One cannot call it God's acre; it is the Devil's! The clouds of night glow on the yellow candles in the horn lanterns and feeble flick