One of the most remote churches in Great Britain was re-opened after restoration, lately, by the Archdeacon of Brecon. It stands (Partrishow by name) on the southern slopes of the Black Mountains in Breconshire. The font dates from 1060, and a rood screen of singular beauty from about the year 1500 There are three stone altars within the church and little western chapel built against it, while in the churchyard stands a preaching cross, and the remains of a stone ledge or bench runs along the south wall of the church, on which the congregation could seat themselves. Out of the stem of an ancient yew tree grows a rowan and a holly tree. The work of restoration was carried out under the care of Mr. W. D. Caröe. Tradition says that the church was originally built by a foreigner who was cured of leprosy by the waters of an adjacent well, and who left "a hatful of gold" to build a church as a thankoffering.

The headmaster of Winchester College, Dr. Burge, recently dedicated a new organ which has been placed in the chapel. The instrument includes some of the pipes and two of the stops of the organ which was built in the chapel by Renatus Harris in the reign of Charles II.
