Rippling Rhymes

ONE WAY TO HELP.
I pay my bills when they are due, and help to aid the cause; it is the smoothest plan in view—the best that ever was. If you owe Johnson fifteen dollars, and Bulger three or four, if you are standing off DeJone, for junk bought at this store, you are not doing all you should, to help to beat the Hun; our prospects are not quite so good, while you are owing him, if Johnson had his fifteen wheels, he'd buy thrift stamps to-day, and so'd Bulger's, who grumpy feels, because you do not pay. If Bulger had the iron men you've owed six months or more, his face would beam with smiles again, he'd buy nine bonds or four, in times of peace the stand-off goes, no rolls we need to flash; but when we are beset by foes, each cent should pay in cash. Then every one can do his best to save his country aid, but all such plans go galley west, unless our bills are paid. Your talk of help and sacrifice may be the stuff that thrills, but all such chatter cuts no ice, unless you pay your bills.
