The Rep. by Pop. Theory.

Sir John says that he gerrymandered solely in the interest of truth and justice, which he, in advanced life, discovers to be synonymous with representation by population. An inspection of the population tables, however, shows that our tricky Premier, if he does think rep. by pop. a good think, has made on the whole a pretty successful attempt to resist the dictates of conscience. In the population of the constituencies as they will stand when the Gerrymandering Bill becomes law will be found the following startling contrasts:
