

An Absolutely Safe Paint

ENGLISH LIQUID PAINT

There should be no mystery about paint. No one, manufacturer or dealer, should ask you to take their judgment on paint and ask you to back their judgment with your own money. You don't run your farm or your business in that way.

Buy your paint on your own judgment. You are told frankly how "English" Liquid Paint is made and what it is made of.

There is a guarantee formula label on every can. You know that it is made of 70% pure white lead, 30% pure zinc white, pure linseed oil, pure turpentine and dryer. You know that it is free from adulterants. You know it is an absolutely safe paint. Come in for a color card.

HOW CAN WE COUNTER-ACT

THE INCREASED COST OF LIVING?

A second's reasoning will supply the answer. Beef and pork are dear and getting dearer all the time, and the cost is out of proportion with their food-value.

EAT MORE BREAD.

There is more nourishment in a shilling's worth of bread than a shilling's worth of beef or pork. But the problem is not done with yet. The shilling's worth of bread is not always the same value. Breadmade from contains more nourishment than any other, because it contains the greatest amount of gluten, the health-giving nutriment of wheat.

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

Yip, yip, yip, said the little fox terrier. And he jumped right up into the St. Bernard's face, and growled at him and snarled at him and tried just as hard as he could to provoke the big dog beyond endurance.

Bernard, who might have made way with the fox terrier with just about one snap of his powerful jaws, simply lifted his head out of the way of the hateful little thing's attack, and trotted about his business as if he were entirely unconscious of the fox terrier's presence.

And in a moment or two the fox terrier realized he wasn't getting any attention and gave it up. Don't you love St. Bernard people? St. Bernard in mind, I mean.

The kind who let their fox terrier critics and detractors and snubbers snap and growl and fly at them without appearing to notice anything is happening.

There was an epigram in "Life" the other day that appealed to me immensely. I quote it from memory. "There is one class of people a little smaller minded than the gossips, and that is the class of people who mind what the gossips say about them."

In the same way it seems to me there is one class of people a bit more childish than the snobs, and that is the class who let the snobs look down upon them.

"No, Mrs. B— hardly notices me when she meets me on the street, and if we are on any committee together in the club, she acts too snobbish for anything—all because she has a little more money and a little bit nicer clothes than I do. And she my next door neighbour. I declare it shies me all up," I heard a woman say the other day.

She should have been ashamed to tell me that.

It showed a weakness in her as well as in the other woman.

By the foolish amount of attention she gave the other woman's attitude, and the mental disturbance she allowed it to create, she placed herself very close to the other woman's level, and moreover gave the other woman encouragement to keep up her snobbish manner.

Whereas, if she had been a St. Bernard person, the fox terrier would have soon grown tired of trying to plague her.

The world is full of snobbish and petty and gossiping fox terriers.

We can't kill them off much as we'd like to sometimes.

But we can make them innocuous by being mental St. Bernards.

(If you happen to own and love a fox terrier, please don't get indignant at this article, but just amend it by substituting black and tan, or poodle, or any other kind of dog you don't like, for fox terrier.)

Despair and Despondency

No one but a woman can tell the story of the suffering, the despair, and the despondency endured by women who carry a daily burden of ill-health and pain because of disorders and derangements of the delicate and important organs that are distinctly feminine. The tortures so bravely endured completely upset the nerves if long continued.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a positive cure for weakness and disease of the feminine organism.

IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG, SICK WOMEN WELL.

It allays inflammation, heals ulceration and soothes pain. It tones and builds up the nerves. It fits for wifehood and motherhood. Honest medicine dealers sell it, and have nothing to urge upon you as "just as good."

It is non-secret, non-alcoholic and has a record of forty years of cures. Ask Your Neighbors. They probably know of some of its many cures. If you want a book that tells all about woman's diseases, and how to cure them, at home, send 31 one-cent stamps to Dr. Pierce to pay cost of mailing only, and he will send you a free copy of his great thousand-page illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser—revised, up-to-date edition, in paper covers, in handsome cloth-binding, 50 stamps. (From Our Own Correspondent.)

Two Policemen Faultily Murdered.

A sad scene took place on Friday evening, May 6th, when two policemen were shot to death by an unknown man they were bringing to the station, on a charge of trying to sell stolen goods. Officers Fortin and O'Connell lost their lives in the discharge of their duties. Death came to the former as he was lending a helping hand to his brother officer. Policeman O'Connell was dressed in plain clothes, and noticing a man coming out of a second-hand store with a large bundle of rubber boots, and in questioning him—not being satisfied with the explanation given, the officer told him he'd be obliged to take him to the station to give more explanation about the number of rubber boots he had in his possession. The man resisted any attempt to bring him to the station seeing that he could easily ward off the attempt of a single policeman. Officer Fortin at this time alighted from a street car, and seeing his brother officer in trouble, went to his assistance. The supposed burglar on seeing the second policeman submitted to go without a struggle. Everything went well till within fifty yards of the station, the place being a narrow street and poorly lighted, the man drew a revolver and shot both policemen. Officer Fortin dropped on the side walk shot dead, while Officer O'Connell fell near him badly wounded, and the murderer made his escape with the revolver still brandishing in his hand. Climbing over fences and going through dark alleyways he was soon lost to view. Officer O'Connell bent over Fortin's body to see if he were badly wounded, only to find that life was extinct, and death must have been instantaneous as he was shot through the brains. Officers from the Chaboulez Police Station hurried to the scene and were horrified to find the lifeless body of Fortin, and O'Connell bleeding profusely and suffering much pain. A hurry-up call was sent to Notre Dame Hospital, and the ambulance conveyed the wounded policeman there, where at first his case was not considered serious, but complications set in and Officer O'Connell died early on Sunday morning.

The deceased policemen were good men, well liked by their superior and brother officers. Fortin was only 11 months on the force, and O'Connell three years. The funerals of both men were attended by over two hundred policemen. Three men are held suspected of complicity in the awful crime of Friday, which has now become a double murder.

One of these is at Plattsburg, another at St. Albans, over the border, while a third is retained in the detective office here, awaiting confrontation with those who witnessed the crime and the second-hand dealers to whom the boots were offered for sale. The man held here is employed as night watchman by a big shoe firm, and the chart of the recording clock he is supposed to punch shows that the man was away between 8.15 p.m.

and 9.25 p.m. Friday night. The shooting was at 9.15. This firm deals in the kind of rubber boots which were in the bag when the late Constable O'Connell arrested the man who afterwards killed him, and they are all of one size, showing that they came from a large warehouse, where cases all of one size are handled, while the smaller firms always order assorted cases.

A woman gave information to the police that at about 8.30 Friday night she saw two men at the back of this warehouse, and one of them was carrying a bag.

Mr. J. M. Vigliano, the Italian interpreter, one of the first to give chase when the murderer ran from Chaboulez street to Inspector street, declared this man under arrest looks very much like the one whom he pursued, but he was wearing a hat instead of a cap he could not swear to the identity positively.

Chief Campeau has offered a reward of $200 for the capture of the assassin. Montreal is certainly growing in crime and is fast becoming a second Chicago in that respect. The large number of bodies found in the canal this spring, the murder of several Italians and others during the past year, the large number of hold-ups, and burglarizing of business houses and stores all tell plainly that the Metropolis of Canada is being infested with a class of criminals that ranks with the worst that the world has ever known.

A Suspect Held in the Double Murder.

The detectives have arrested the man they think guilty of the awful tragedy, and everything points to the strongest kind of a case against him. He was the watchman mentioned in this article.

"We the undersigned jurors find that Jules Fortin died in the city of Montreal on 6th May inst., from a bullet wound at the hands of Timothy Candy, and Daniel O'Connell died on 6th May also from a bullet wound inflicted upon him by the same Timothy Candy, who is to be held criminally responsible."

Timothy Candy, ex-night watchman or Messrs. Ames-Holden, Limited, boot and shoe manufacturers, Inspector street, was held responsible by a coroner's jury for the shooting of Constables O'Connell and Fortin. He will be charged with wilful murder. The verdict rendered by the coroner's jury was given as above.

Candy has been identified by the two men he tried to sell the stolen property. Before Coroner McMahon at the morgue on Tuesday morning, May 10th, each of them swore positively that Candy was the man, and everything in the Ames-Holden building point to his guilt. The rubber boots were stolen from that firm. The ending of the time sheet of the clocks in the building shows that he was absent at the time of the double murder. Even the revolver, which was furnished Candy by the firm, points to his guilt. The night watchman was allowed no spare cartridges, and when the revolver was found on Saturday morning on the desk of the oreman of the establishment it was loaded with Kynoch cartridges, not he sort supplied by the firm.

Timothy Candy, the night watchman, is 37 years of age, born in Liverpool and married. He came to this country some two years ago, worked for the Canada Refining Company, and settled in this city after his wife had come over from England. However, his wife did not like this country, and he returned to England, where he died last winter. A month ago he came back to Montreal, and after three weeks secured employment at the Ames-Holden Shoe Company, as night watchman, on the strength of former certificates.

Candy came to work Saturday and Sunday night, but, on Monday morning he showed a letter to another employee, saying his wife had written to him, asking him to come back. When first asked by the police about this letter, the suspect said he had torn it to pieces, but he later admitted that it was a fabrication.

Engineer Millard, of the Slater Shoe factory, for whom Candy was working last year, said that the man was discharged on account of carelessness. He said that Candy had threatened to shoot him, but he paid no attention to this at the time.

At the Ames-Holden factory it was stated that before he was arrested Candy expressed the intention of leaving at once for England without waiting for his six days' pay still due. He said at the time he had only $7 in his pocket.

He dreads the ordeal of his trial, and says that he'd like the authorities to send him to the gallows immediately and be done with it.
