Let Justice Be Done.

For four long years civilization has been in agony, and has witnessed a world wide scale a sordid, and brutal slaying of humanity forced upon it by the gunman of Germany, Kaiser Wilhelm II. In this unprecedented slaughter, this sacrifice to the Moloch of war, ten millions of the flower of manhood have made the greatest holocaust of history sacrificed because of the greatest conspiracy ever conceived by human brain. A conspiracy of murder and loot born at the palace of Potsdam, and brought to life by a monarch who posed as the guardian of peace and security for the world. In Berlin were gathered together the men and the means for a war that would bring untold glories to the German arms. From Berlin went forth the word that plunged a world in blood, and brought thrones crashing to the ground; but the thrones have been those of the aggressors, and far from the wealth and power which the European war was to have brought to the Prussian, have come in their stead defeat and surrender. From this defeat and surrender must come a vindication of that law which says "Whoso sheddeth man's blood by man shall his blood be shed," and ten million lives slain cry out for the vengeance which must be visited upon the head of the arch-slayer. What is the duty of civilization in the case of the Emperor of Germany? What will be the verdict of the jury of a stricken world, a world which will take years to recover the awful loss of life, brought upon it by the greatest criminal in history? The first whisperings of this question are audible now, and it is fitting that they should be heard at the time when the bloodguilty German is about to sign an armistice agreement, because this question must thrust itself to the front of the universal tragedy now nearing a close. The man who murders his fellow man flies at the hands of the law. Society will not permit a murderer to walk rebanded through its circles. But what of the man who has the blood of millions on his hands, who has the multitudinous seas incarnadined with the life blood of innocent victims "making the green one red"? Must mitigation for crime be found in its very magnitude? Shall the criminal who murders one victim die and he who has slain millions not in deed but by his word, live? But who is to be the, or to form the, final court of justice which will try the Kaiser on the indictment prepared against him? The leading nations are gathered together to day in an international tribunal, which may hereafter substitute the arbitrament of peace for that of the sword. From these a court could be formed by the selection of a chief justice from each power represented, which would try by formal procedure on a criminal count, those leaders of Germany and Austria who hatched the conspiracy and opened the floodgates of murder, rapine and arson. These men could be represented by the ablest lawyers of their respective countries, and the proceedings could be conducted with that excessive carefurness of detail which characterizes criminal legal procedure in the courts of the civilized world. Accused and accusers could both take the stand in turn and testify in their own behalf. To quote a contemporary:

"Let the original State records be produced, and notably these, if such there be, which will prove that Germany moved Heaven and Earth to hold back Austria from her mad insistence. Let Von Holowich swear that he never in the Reichstag admitted that the invasion of Belgium was a moral outrage. Let Von Jagow bring proof that he never referred to a German-signed treaty for the protection of Belgium as a 'scrap of paper.' Let Von Tirpitz swear that he never sent his U boats forth to do wholesale murder upon the high seas, and let him produce documentary evidence that the 'Lusitania' was an armed cruiser, and therefore a vessel of war. Let the military records be brought forth to disprove the judicial murder of Nurse Cavell and Captain Fryatt, and a hundred others. And if it be objected that this would be a prejudicial proceeding, since no German or Austrian judge would sit on the bench, the answer would be that it was made so by the deliberate act of the accused themselves, who in their international relations had long ago disavowed the accepted laws of civilization and substituted therefor a code of military expediency, brute force and unbridled cruelty. If the military masters of Germany, from the Kaiser down, should be found guilty in the first degree, it is conceivable that the majesty of law having been vindicated, the extreme penalty might be commuted, as a concession to sentimentalists (which God forbid) to one of imprisonment for life. But above all things 'Let justice be done, though the heavens fall.' And let it once be recorded again for the warning of all ages and peoples to come that 'They who take the sword shall perish with the sword.'"

"Harbour Tales."

A companion volume to "Battles Royal Down North" has been issued by the Revell Co., London and New York, bearing the title "Harbour Tales Down North," the author being the late Norman Duncan. As the title implies the book contains a collection of "down North" stories, written in that imitable style of which Duncan alone was the master. As "Battles Royal" portrays pen pictures of struggles with and victories over the sea, the ice floe and the treacherous shoal, which occur in the everyday life of the Newfoundland fisherman, "Harbour Tales" no less give the reader an insight into the love of affairs of the same hardy sons of Terra Nova. And these men were as sincere in their affections as they were heroic in discharging the other duties of life. The volume, uniform in binding and titling with its twin, contains nine stories, each one complete: "Man's Luck," "The Siren of Sealawag Run," "The Art of Terry Lute," "The Doctor of Afternoon Arm," "A Grouse of Gingerbread Cove," "A Madon's of Tinkle Tickle," "The Little Nipper o' Hide an' Seek Harbor," "Small Sam Small," "An Idyl of Ricketty Tickle." The collections are the finest works of Norman Duncan, who found in Newfoundland an untapped source of literary matter. If "Battles Royal Down North" is a man's book, being tales of heart-breaking struggles with the elements, then "Harbour Tales" is a drama of human love and devotion, full and rich in both pathos and humour, which will appeal to man and woman alike. The late Mr. Duncan has been styled by Sir Wm. Robertson Nicoll "the English Pierre Loti," while Mr. Frank Bullen places him by the side of Joseph Conrad and Kipling. In that they do no dishonor to these famous writers. Mr. Duncan spent many seasons in Newfoundland and Labrador gathering material for the stories which will forever connect him with this island. Not one of his readers can forget red-blooded Billy Topsail, and the stories bound up in the twin volumes "Battles Royal" and "Harbour Tales" are full of the same red-blooded characters strong and virile and equally consistent in their loves and in their hates. Those who have added "Battles Royal" to their library will assuredly have to purchase "Harbour Tales" to keep it and them company. The book is on sale at the store of S. E. Garland.

White With Snow.
The South Side Hills this morning were so white, that many early rising folk thought that Morris had made good his promise while they slept, but alas, instead of sheep it was beautiful snow, the harbinger of winter.

Weather Across Country.
North-east wind, strong, dull; raining in places; temperature 22 to 30 above.

The Epidemic.

Ten patients were admitted to the Grenfell Hall Hospital yesterday, the wife and three children of Ernest Collins, Signal Hill, who died there Thursday night; three cases from a schooner, and three from town. Four patients were released. There seems to have been a slight abatement in the disease in the city, but we must not relax our efforts, lest another outbreak occur, one much more disastrous than the first. Thus, if the authorities are contemplating opening churches and nickels we advise them not to do so yet. The chances are that after its enforced absence from those places, the public would crowd in greater numbers than ever before, thus certainly spreading the disease. Fifty cases are reported at St. Mary's, and three deaths occurred during the week; three more cases were reported at Bonavista yesterday, six have developed at Glenwood, and medical assistance was needed badly; a doctor will be sent.

Fishery News.

With a total catch of 3,820 quintals, the fishery between Cape John and Bonavista Head is now about over, though 45 motor boats are still engaged. Last week's take did not exceed 20 quintals. Between St. Jacques and Boxey Pt. the catch to date is 6,825 quintals, with only 30 quintals for last week. 35 dories are operating, but owing to scarcity of bait and unfavourable weather, very little is now being done. A late report to the Board of Trade gives the catch from Channel to Grand Bay at 2,900 quintals. Last week with 50 dories and skiffs and 3 boats, 250 quintals were landed. Weather has been favourable for operations and cod continues plentiful. Bait, however, is scarce.

Jerusalem was Surrendered

TO BRITISH COOKS.
London, Nov. 5. - (Canadian Press despatch from Reuters Limited) - Major Allan Burgoyne, lecturing before the Royal Photographic Society told a good story of the surrender of Jerusalem. He said that the city was actually surrendered to a couple of British regimental cooks, who were out trying to get some salad when the Arabs came out with the keys of the city. One Tommy asked what they were expected to do with the keys of the "blinkin' city". Major Burgoyne said that the scene was accounted so historic that it was reconstructed and photographed.
