WHEN THE WIFE IS SICK.

Don't you think most men regard it somewhat in the light of a personal grievance when their wives are ill?

I don't mean very ill. That's another matter. When a woman is very ill, she is very ill. It is not a matter of pride or a matter of being a privileged character. It is a matter of being a human being who needs love and tenderness for one who is kept stowed away in lavender drawers. I once happened to see a man for the first time when his wife was dangerously ill. His devotion was beautiful. Afterward I met a man who was a very happy couple. He said, "They adore each other when she is very ill and get all over it soon as they are better."

The Minor Illnesses. The illness which the wife husband unconsciously resents is the minor one—the sick headache, the backache, the sore throat, the spell of overtired nerves. He is always sure that it was totally unnecessary, that the only thing which caused it was his wife's persistence in doing something that he doesn't regard as worth fussing up with unnecessary social obligations, doing too much for some of her relatives. He would like to sympathize with her but the view of the fact that the thing that must have caused it (no matter how much else she does) is that one thing of which he disapproves, he really feels he ought not to.

Contagious Illnesses. Another peculiar thing about husbands and their wives minor illnesses is this. There seems to be something contagious about them. I don't mean that the husband actually catches the specific disease but—well this is what a friend of mine says about her husband: "I never yet felt absolutely miserable that Henry didn't say, 'Well, I don't feel very well myself.'"

Did you ever meet Henry's twin brother? How midvictorian wives who were always more or less ailing ever got by is something I often wonder about when I am reminded of those days when so many women "enjoyed ill health."

Impatient Husbands Please Take Note. In a recent magazine was a jest which delighted me because of its relation to this subject. The old German's wife had died and in the interim before the funeral the old man was smoking his pipe and thinking it over. Finally he came out with this "No, maybe the old woman was sick after all."

Impatient husbands who think their wives are ailing just to annoy them are invited to consider the above.

Tension in Irish Affairs Relieved.

Belfast a Hotbed of Disorder--Military Evacuation Resumed--Most Critical Period in Living Memory -- New Aberdeen Looters Committed for Trial.

LONDON, Feb. 15. Lord Birkenhead told the Lords to-day that the appointment of a joint commission to investigate the boundary conflicts in Ireland had been agreed to. He said this would lead to further co-operation between Premier Craig and Michael Collins, affording prospect of a pacific settlement. Winston Churchill told the Commons that Collins had secured release of 26 of the Ulstermen kidnapped by Sinn Feiners, and that the British Government desired the Ulster Government to liberate the football players whose detention is probably the only reason why kidnapped captives are still held.

WHY EVACUATION WAS SUSPENDED. LONDON, Feb. 15. The announcement that the British Government regarded it necessary to suspend evacuation of British troops from Southern Ireland, was made by Winston Churchill in the House of Commons to-day. The sole reason for suspension, said Mr. Churchill, was the disturbed situation of the Northern border, and not because of anything that had happened in the Southern part of Ireland. The Colonial Secretary said Michael Collins, who would cross to England to-night to confer with Cabinet members, had informed the Government he would "take steps before leaving Dublin to secure release of the kidnapped Ulstermen as soon as possible. Collins stated in his message that he knew where a number of the kidnapped men were held. Answering questions as to whether British troops would be placed in Monaghan County to prevent further raids from the South, Mr. Churchill said, "quite apart from the serious political reasons the Government has received the unanimous advice of military experts against the adoption of such a course at the present juncture."

A CRITICAL PERIOD. LONDON, Feb. 15. Lord Birkenhead, head High Chancellor, referring to the Irish Question in the House of Lords to-night, reiterated the statement of Winston Churchill in the Commons, that allowance must be made for the fact that the Provisional Government of the Irish Free State possessed as yet only restricted powers. The High Chancellor said it was obvious the duty of the British Government to support these men in Ireland, who, under almost inconceivable difficulties, were making a courageous attempt to carry out the Treaty. Declaring he still hoped discussions between Premier Craig and Michael Collins would be renewed, Lord Birkenhead said, "we should be deceiving ourselves if we remained blind to the fact that in the next few weeks we are going through the most critical period probably in living memory. Our one hope is that we should keep cool heads and our tongues."

EVACUATION RESUMED. BELFAST, Feb. 15. Arrangements for the evacuation of British troops from Southern Ireland were resumed to-day after a suspension lasting two days.

BEHIND COLLINS AND GRIFFITH. LONDON, Feb. 15. Michael Collins to-day received a cablegram from New York saying "eighty-five per cent of the membership of the Association for the Reconstitution of the Irish Republic is fairly behind yourself and Griffith."

CONFIDENCE IN WIRTH. BERLIN, Feb. 15. The Reichstag to-day voted confidence in Chancellor Wirth by 230 to 185.

22 KILLED, 60 WOUNDED IN BELFAST. LONDON, Feb. 15. Shooting continued in Belfast to-day, four persons being killed and many wounded. Casualties since Saturday were 22 persons killed and 60 wounded, not counting those receiving minor injuries. British troops were sent into Belfast to-day to restore order. They had hardly assumed duty before one soldier was shot and wounded. Michael Collins sent word to Winston Churchill that he was in a position to secure the release of a number of kidnapped Ulsterites. Collins is on his way to London.

EXTENDING RESTRICTIVE EMIGRATION LAW. A Bill extending the life of the three per cent. Restrictive Immigration Law until June 30, 1923, was ordered reported to-day by the House Immigration Committee. This law restricts the annual entry of aliens into the United States to about 350,000 persons. It will expire next June unless extended.

TWENTY-FOUR COMMITTED FOR TRIAL. SYDNEY, Feb. 15. Twenty-four men and boys were to-day committed for trial before the Supreme Court for alleged complicity in the recent riots at New Aberdeen when the Dominion Coal Company Store was looted of goods valued at $90,000. Sydney locals of the United Mine Workers are passing resolutions calling upon the Nova Scotia Government to cancel the leases of the Dominion Coal Company and to work the mines as a public enterprise.

BUTS FROM GERMANY. BUENOS AIRES, Feb. 15. Ministry of Marine has purchased eighteen auxiliary craft from Hugo Stinnes, German financier, at an average price of two million German marks. The Ministry announcement indicated that Herr Stinnes's offer was more advantageous than those of British concerns.

BONAR LAW REPLIES. LONDON, Feb. 15. Right Hon. A. Bonar Law, former Unionist Government leader, speaking in Glasgow yesterday said he felt in better health than for a great many years, and attributed this to freedom from worry. As far as he could see he did not intend to join any government but hoped to take an interest in public affairs as a private member of the House of Commons. Mr. Bonar Law declared that he would do all he could to prevent a change of government until he felt that the change was likely to improve the difficult situation confronting the country.
