Natural History in Postage Stamps

(By B. S. H. GRANT, F.R.P.S.L.) The appearance of the lion on the British Empire Exhibition stamps reminds us that much interesting information of a zoological nature may be gleaned from the postage stamps of the world. Quite a large number contain pictures of birds, animals, and fishes. Philately is thus a valuable aid in promoting knowledge of zoology by association of the animals portrayed with the countries picturing them.

Elephants and tigers appear most frequently. Tigers form the principal subjects for the low values of the Federated Malay States and elephants on the higher, while elephants are also prominent on many of the moor and Liberia.

Camela or dromedaries are depicted on the stamps of French Somali. Obock, Nyassa, Iraq, and the Sudan, ter of a number of interesting labels tuguese Nyassa. Abyssinia also has stamps showing the rhinoceros, ostrich, and stag.

One is not surprised to find the llams in evidence on the Peruvian stamps, and the eagle on those of Mexico. The Australian kangaroo stamps are well known to all. The emu and lyre birds are seen in certain values of the adhesive stamps of New South Wales. The quezal forms the central figure on the socalled "parrot" stamps of Guatemala while French Guiana shows us the ant-ester.

Three countries in particular have a whole series of stamps devoted to zoological subjects. On these of Liberia we find a plantain eater, great egret, palm civit, fishing vulture, bommi fish, hippopotamus, chimpanzee, Agama lizard, lyre-horned antelope and snakes. Newfoundland shows us the caribou, ptarmigan, codfish, seals and dogs, while Labuan and North Borneo include the Malay stag and tapir, the crocodile, Argus pheasant, elephant, peacock, rhinoceros, cassowary, wild bull, and par-

This does not exhaust the list, for the Peace stamps of Japan of 1919 give us the dove, Western Australia the sawn, Tasmania the platypus, Cape of Good Hope the ram, and the Orange River Colony the springbok and gun. Horses, mules and buffalo are depicted on the stamps of the United States lion. This animal also appears on centrated their attention on Mars the first King George stamps of
