THEY SAVED A LIFE

And Received the Royal Canadian Humane Society's Medal.

Gallant Action of Herbert John Lush and Louis Dambra Fittingly Recognized
by Mr. Adam Brown,
President of the Society.

Herbert John Lush, a tall, well-formed lad of 15, and Louis Dambra, a slightly smaller lad of 13, were last night made the recipients of the bronze medal for saving life which is presented by the Royal Canadian Humane Society, where special bravery is shown. On May 10 last Clarence Paul, Herbert J. Lush and Louis Dambra were bathing in the Thames at Decher's Island. Paul got beyond his depth and began to drown, and Lush swam to his assistance. The drowning boy grabbed his rescuer around the body and dragged him down with him when he sank, and both would probably have drowned but for the action of young Dambra, who swam to their assistance, and was instrumental in saving both lives. Although the evening was very stormy, Somerset Hall, where the presentation took place, was well filled. Young Lush, Dambra and Paul occupied seats in the front row. Dean Innes occupied the chair, and in his opening remarks said that the most discouraging matter in connection with humane work was the lack of public sympathy. He briefly explained the aims of the association, and made a very eulogistic reference to Adam Brown, the president of the Humane Society of Canada, as he introduced him.

Mr. Brown stated at the commencement of his address that he was gratified that throughout Canada there was a spirit abroad that was taking cognizance of all humane acts. Not only were dumb animals, but children as well, protected from brutes in human form. The press had been most kind in regard to the work, and the pulpit most outspoken. Some 50 years ago the first Humane Society was organized in England, and ever since then the society had been growing in a quiet and unostentatious manner, educating the people to the proper treatment of God's defenceless creatures. Much cruelty arose from thoughtlessness. Nothing made this fact more apparent than the cruel check rein. Mr. Brown also spoke of the extreme cruelty of docking horses' tails, and the cowardice of trap shooting. While admitting that he trod upon dangerous ground, he spoke emphatically against the wearing of song birds as ornaments.

Mr. Brown then launched into the history of the Royal Canadian Humane Society, organized a year ago in Toronto. He explained the objects of the association, and how at the intercession of the Governor-General the Queen had graciously permitted the body to use the prefix "royal." He presented the dean with six posters containing instructions in the method of resuscitation, and requested that he see that they were posted up in the locality of public swimming places. He also showed an arrangement for the saving of the lives of people endangered by ice accidents.

Mr. Brown then called the two youths to the platform, and after reciting the act of heroism performed by them, pinned the medals on their breasts amid applause of the audience.

"If in future life you are in need of a recommendation," said Mr. Brown, "show them that," and he touched the medal.

During the evening, Miss Maud McLaren sang "Good-bye, Summer," very sweetly. Miss Isabelle Love recited a dialect sketch in a very finished manner, and Miss Nellie Burnip exhibited her wonderfully strong and sweet voice in a manner that won unbounded applause.

A collection in aid of the Humane Society was taken up at the close.

NO WEDDING.

The Bridegroom Elect Fixed the Hour and Suddenly Expired.

Toronto, Oct. 23.—The very sudden death of Mr. Isaac M. Chafee, of No. 13 Mutual street, Toronto, Monday afternoon, thwarted matrimonial plans which were to have been carried out in this city today. Mr. Chafee is an elderly retired merchant, and he was engaged to be married to Miss Perry, who for some time has been residing in this city with her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar H. Watkins, of 17 East avenue south. Mr. Chafee wrote to Miss Perry and to Rev. Canon Curran, fixing 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon as the hour for the wedding, and all arrangements were completed to bring the event off quietly at St. Thomas' Church at that hour. The wedding breakfast was to have been given at Mr. Watkins' residence immediately afterwards. After mailing the letters Mr. Chafee died almost instantly. The receipt of the news was a severe shock to Miss Perry, and Mr. Watkins' household, and much sympathy is expressed by friends.

BEFORE HIS WIFE'S EYES.

Mr. John Vivian of Brantford Dropped
Dead While Reading a Paper.

Brantford, Oct. 30.—A terribly sudden death occurred yesterday morning when Mr. John Vivian passed away at his home, 230 Darling street, without a moment's notice. Mr. Vivian had been suffering from indigestion for a few days, but took little heed to his ailment. Yesterday morning, while sitting reading to his wife, he dropped in the middle of a paragraph and remarked with a smile, that his heart was throbbing strangely. Then before another word could be spoken his head dropped forward, and before his startled wife could reach his side he was dead. A medical man was called in, but could do nothing. The cause of death was heart failure.

Mr. Vivian was a man of about 40 years of age, and had lived in this city for many years. Latterly he was in the employ of Mr. John Mann. A family of a wife and two children survive him.

SEVEN MAY DIE.

Wholesale Poisoning in a Swell Southern Hotel.

Huntington, W. Va., Oct. 29.—About 20 guests of the Adolphus Hotel are sick. The physicians pronounced it a case of poisoning. Those expected to die are: J. P. W. Bowers, of Wheeling, traveling salesman; J. M. Baker, traveling salesman, New York; Harry Ranney, of Huntington; Mrs. Ranney, wife of above; W. R. W. Sterling, proprietor of the hotel; Miss Mary Sterling, daughter; Homer Smith, Point Pleasant, unaccounted for.

Many others are sick, but not seriously. The cause of the poisoning is unknown.

This is the earliest Winter and Fall Clothing Sale ever attempted, but we are in it to stay, with prices to suit the masses. We can suit you no matter what your price or size is.

Come early and avoid the rush. You will remember our great sale in the fall of 1893. This will eclipse anything we have ever attempted before. Remember the date, Saturday, Nov. 2.
