ABOLITION OF THE BAR IS THE SUPREME ISSUE SAYS LIBERAL LEADER

Mr. N. W. Rowell, K. C., Addresses Large Gathering at Ilderton in Interests of Mr. Sutherland's Candidature.

ONTARIO AGAINST THE OPEN BAR AND IT MUST GO, SAY SPEAKERS

By Our Own Men.]
Ilderton, Oct. 22.—That the open bar must go, whatever may be the verdict of East Middlesex on Monday next, was most emphatically declared by Mr. N. W. Rowell, K. C., M. P., at a meeting held here in Foresters' Hall in the interests of Mr. William Sutherland, the independent candidate. The abolition of the bar was the real issue of the campaign, and as the father of this policy, he called upon all those who support that stand to give their undivided assistance to Mr. Sutherland in his campaign.
Mr. Rowell was in excellent form. It was fitting that his first speech in favor of his new policy in an election contest should be made at the home of his childhood, where first he received his lessons in temperance. East Middlesex was the first to express an opinion on this policy, and he hoped that on Monday next, the electors would be true to their trust, and return a supporter of the policy advocated by him.

A Strong Speech.
The worthy, and, at a wet, dark, foreboding night, but the hall was filled to capacity. The strong speech of the Liberal leader made a distinct appeal to the audience, which applauded vigorously.
Reeve R. W. Jackson, of London Township, was chairman of the meeting. He remembered Mr. Rowell when he was a lad, and had watched his career with the deepest interest. He was glad to stand behind such a leader, and hoped that on Thanksgiving Day, the electors of East Middlesex would give him cause for rejoicing when the returns came in from the riding.

Mr. William McDonald, M. P., Centre Bruce, spoke briefly. The present assessment act was severely criticized, the speaker demanding that the municipalities be given the privilege of exercising local option in this matter. Real estate should be assessed to its full value, but improvements should not. His own suggestion was that 40 or 50 per cent should be the proper ratio to pay. A general law should be adapted, doing away with the present haphazard system of assessment.

HIS BLADDER WAS TERRIBLY INFLAMED GIN PILLS Brought Relief

Larder Lake, Ont., March 28.
"I had been suffering for some time with my kidneys and urine. I was constantly passing water, which was very scanty, sometimes as many as thirty times a day. Each time the pain was something awful, and no rest at night.
"I heard of your GIN PILLS and decided to give them a trial at once. I sent my clerk 60 pills to get them, and I am pleased to inform you that in less than six hours, I felt relief.
"In two days the pain had left me entirely. I took about a box and today feel as well as ever and my kidneys are acting quite naturally again."

"SIO CASTLEMAN."
GIN PILLS soothe the irritated bladder—heat the sick, weak, painful kidneys—and strengthen both these vital organs. Money back if they fail. Fifty cents a box, six for $2.50. Sample free if you write National Drug and Chemical Company of Canada, Limited, Toronto.

measures, but demanded instead that the traffic be wiped out. That was the reason he was working behind Mr. Rowell in his policy. No person took Sir James Whitney's anti-treating proposal seriously. Its announcement was for very obvious reasons, merely to head off Mr. Rowell, nothing more. The latter struck at the root of things. Mr. Rowell will lose some support from a certain wing of the Liberal party, but he will gain many more to replace them. Conservatives were seriously thinking on this question, and many were coming to the Liberal cause.

Mr. Rowell's Address.
Mr. Rowell, on rising, was given a most cordial reception. He was glad to come to Ilderton, to his boyhood home, to advocate his policy, looking to the abolition of the open bar. It was a policy that had been advocated by temperance people of both political persuasions for many years, and one he had himself been advocating for a long period. He felt certain that many Conservatives, pledged to support this advanced step in temperance legislation, would rally behind him and give their votes for so good a cause.

The Liberal leader paid a tribute to the late Robert Sutherland, former member for the riding.
"I deeply regret the death of Robert Sutherland," said Mr. Rowell. "I did not have an opportunity of meeting him until after he was elected to the Legislature. From that time on, we met in the most intimate friendship. I learned to respect and admire him, for his sound business judgment, his large heart, his generous sympathy and strong character. It was a great loss to the Province and the Dominion of Canada when Robert Sutherland was taken."

"Many Liberals, when the riding became vacant, were in favor of having a scratch Liberal candidate, adopting all the policies for which they stood. Under normal conditions I would have referred that I would be glad if the issue were straight, Mr. friends, however, tell me that conditions were not normal. After the late Mr. Sutherland was elected, charges were made, reflecting on his method of winning the election. Charges, unfair and untrue, were made against him. It is the rule that all mouths are closed at the graveside, but this was not the case in East Middlesex. Mr. Sutherland's brother and his friends, desiring to vindicate the memory of Mr. Robert Sutherland, and the corner entered the field.

There was nothing I would not gladly do to place Robert Sutherland in his true light before the public. I felt it my duty to assist Mr. William Sutherland, to vindicate his brother, and because he has some out, pledged to support the main features of the platform, the abolition of the bar.
"You know some of our journalistic opponents a short time ago were complaining because I had not come into East Middlesex. They have changed their tune now, and they tell us that we have no business coming here at all. I cannot release them at all. I thought I would give them unbounded pleasure by coming up, but from all appearances I have caused them nothing but vexation."

Strange Coincidence.
"I am glad to visit the campaign for this policy in East Middlesex, in Ilderton, my boyhood home, and the home of my father all through his life. It is a strange coincidence that 70 years ago my father organized the first temperance society in this county, and one of the first in the Dominion of Canada. He was the second president in 1842, and with him were associated a number of the fine old pioneers of this district, men whose names are familiar to you all.
"Mr. Rowell had an intimate book of the meetings held in these far-off days, and he read of them most effectively. This society was a pioneer in reform, and the charges made at that time had been marvellous. Hotel bars had been wiped out by the hundred. Drunkenness had come to be looked down upon as a great evil. The attitude of the public had changed, and the pleasure by coming up, but from all appearances I have caused them nothing but vexation."

Lead the Province.
"I covet for East Middlesex that she should in this issue give the province the lead," said Mr. Rowell. "I covet for you the proud distinction of leading the procession of constituencies favoring the abolition of the open bar. It is the fight. I would like to have your support, your encouragement, but remember that nothing you can do will stay the progress of the fight. We are battling against this evil, and we are going to continue to battle against it. The open bar must go, and we are going to remain in the fight until it does go. I would much rather have you with me than against me in the fight, but I want to impress upon you that this is not a struggle of today or of a brief time. We are in it until the open bar is completely wiped out of existence. You in East Middlesex may encourage us, but nothing you can do will discourage us. You must vote for a man who is pledged to support it in preference to the man who will not pledge himself. I would not be surprised when East Middlesex has done its duty on Monday next, that the verdict will have a great deal of influence in bringing Sir James Whitney to see the justice of our policy and give us, if not all, at least a large measure of what we are asking. The policy was a joke at first, Mr. Hanna declared, but the growing tide of public favor made him realize that it was no joke, and they were stammered into his policy, the anti-treating policy. That felt flat. You do not hear them advocating it in this riding. No word do you hear about that great policy. Are they ashamed of the child they brought into the world, and are going to have a flogging on somebody else's doorstep? It was a mere question of excellence, given forth to hold the temperance wing of the party. That will not work, however. I am not staked if they do not try something else. Sir James does come out for the abolition of the bar, he can count on our enthusiastic and undivided support.
"How are you going to succeed? By giving for the candidate pledged to support the policy, not the candidate who will not pledge himself. There has been some criticism of Mr. Sutherland because he reserves the right to vote for Sir James Whitney. If the Premier brings a more advanced temperance legislation, if any person is in a position to criticize, I am, but I want to tell you that I am perfectly willing that he should reserve the right to vote for any temperance legislation. I will do so myself. I have no fault to find whatever with that attitude, and will give my support to the most advanced temperance legislation that can be introduced."

Whitney's Proposals.
The speaker criticized the anti-treating propaganda of Sir James Whitney. It was unworkable and unenforceable. A detective would be required in every barroom. The Conservative party did not treat that suggestion seriously. It was made when the party was in a state of blue funk, occasioned by the introduction of Mr. Rowell's policy, and made any sort of a suggestion merely to offset the growing tide in favor of the Liberal leader's platform. Of course, Mr. Whitney consulted with his agents of wholesale and retail dealers in ardent spirits, and they were favorable to the anti-treating propaganda. It was certainly true that they preferred it to the abolition of the bar.
"I covet the support of East Middlesex in this campaign," said Mr. McDonald. "Your late member, Mr. Robert Sutherland, helped to frame it, and now I hope you will send his brother to help put it in force. He has pledged himself to support it, and he is a man of his word."

Wide Out Traffic.
Thomas R. W. Westminister, president of the Dominion Alliance for Middlesex, spoke briefly. The liquor question was one that was always presenting itself in some form or other to the people of this and all other countries, and demanded settlement. He was not in favor of restrictive

Explain the Policy.
Mr. Rowell explained at some length what his policy meant. It meant the

AMUSEMENTS

"Excuse Me" Scores Again.

The comedy farce, "Excuse Me," which was so well received here last season, was presented at the Grand Tuesday night before a large audience and again won its place in the hearts of theatregoers of this city. All the action in the play, which is in three acts, takes place on an express train from Chicago to San Francisco, by way of the Nevada city. The passengers who have berths in the Pullman, in which the first act takes place, include Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Wellington, who are on their way to the Nevada city to secure a divorce, and who have taken the same train unknown to each other until after the train leaves Chicago, an English tourist, a "drummer," a lady, a missionary, a minister and his wife, another separated couple, Lieut. Harry Mallory, Miss Marjorie Newton, and her dog.

Willis P. Sweetman, as the negro porter on the train, kept the audience in a continual round of laughter from the time that the train left Chicago until the marriage scene, uniting the Lieutenant and Miss Newton, was performed just before Reno was reached.

Miss Geraldine O'Brien, as Miss Newton, who intended to elope with the officer, but whose wedding did not take place as the taxi in which they were going to the clergyman's broke down, was also the cause of much laughter. Her requests that the train be stopped in order that she could go shopping, and that the train be backed up so that she could recover her dog which she thought had fallen out of a window, were so absurd that no one except the conductor could help laughing.

Along with Thomas Walsh, the conductor, she presented a clever piece of acting while trying to persuade him to grant her demands.
The remainder of the company were excellent in their respective parts, and the large audience was greatly pleased with the production. The scenery, which was composed of the interiors of a Pullman and a chair car of the train, was good.

"Bunty Pulls the Strings."
The attraction at the Grand tonight and tomorrow night is "Bunty Pulls the Strings," which brought the audience to its feet on its first presentation last season. Graham Moffat, who wrote this play, has done the unusual thing in his first real play. Choosing comedy for his means of putting humanity on the stage, he has managed to keep natural humor without letting force creep in. It is all genuine. There is not a stagey thing about it. All the favorites of last season's company of players will again be seen.

"The Senator Keeps House."
William H. Crane, in "The Senator Keeps House," a comedy in four acts, by Martha Morton, which he produced at the Garlick Theatre, New York city, where it remained for four months last

"The Rosary."

At the present day, when so many plays are being presented which deal with questionable subjects, it is a relief to turn to a drama which breathes purity and good fellowship, and leads the way to a brighter view of life and humanity. Such a play is "The Rosary," written by Edward E. Kane expressly for Messrs. Rowland and Clifford, and produced by them. The theme of the play concerns a man and woman happily married and surrounded with every luxury that money and culture can secure. But the husband is an unbeliever, an atheist, without faith of any kind. The play will be seen at the Grand next Monday (Thanksgiving Day, which is H. G. Koonan in the role of Father Brian Kelly the priest. Seats Friday.
