THE ARCTIC PRESS

Papers of the Northern Printed Just Once a Year

There exist several journals that make their appearance only once a year. These are published within the confines of the north polar circle.

The Eskimo Bulletin, for example, is edited near Cape Prince of Wales, on Behring Strait.

Here, in a village inhabited by Eskimos, the English missionaries have established a school, and as only one steamer lands at this place, and that only once a year, that news that it brings is consigned to a sheet of paper printed with the mimeograph. Its size is eight by twelve inches. The paper is very thick and only one surface is used.

This Eskimo Bulletin in a subhead-line claims to be the only yearly paper.
This, however, is an error, for there is an annual sheet published in Godthaab, Greenland, where a small printing office was established in 1882, whence news sheets and lithographs prints have been issued. The journal in question is entitled Atuassutit, Inuktitut, Tussummar, meaning that is "Something for reading: accounts of all sorts of entertaining subjects." The language is that of Greenland, a dialect of the Eskimos.

Prince Edward Island.

HOW MANY ANCESTORS

Trace Back Twenty Generations And It Will Be Seen Everyone Has Over a Million

The full number of ancestors possessed by every individual is far greater than is generally supposed. It is usually accepted that a person has only two ancestors in each generation of past time. This is based upon the theory that each person had only two parents and is fostered by the prevalent practice of ignoring the forebears of the mothers all the way.

Glancing down the succession of father and son from age to age, one notices that for each individual in the protracted series there are only two progenitors, and receive the impression that these are all that need be taken in to account, and it simplifies the reckoning greatly to lose sight of all the others.

If this impression were correct, the number of man's ancestors traced back to the beginning of history, and adding two for each generation, would not altogether amount to only 1,200 if traced back for 20,000 years.

There are some whose ideas are a little broader. They recognize that the mothers of the long procession bring in new relationships, but treating them as terminal branches, they return to the trunk line as the only one having permanence, and therefore the only one necessary to follow.

It is now admitted that the number of ancestors of every human being doubles in every generation, as his descent is traced upward, excepting for certain checks which retard this natural law. In the first generation backward, a man has two ancestors—his father and mother. In the second he has four in the third he has eight, in the fourth 16, and, by the time he reaches his 30th generation, he is compelled to acknowledge his descent from 1,048,576 ancestors.

There are families in which it is impossible that the law of increase in ancestry should not be doubled after the first generation. There must be two parents for each individual. It might be possible to have two grandparents instead of four, as in the case of the Inos. The custom of ancient Peru required that the legitimate queen of their sovereign must be his sister, because, as a child of the sun, he could not ally himself with an ordinary mortal.

Poverty in Japan
After a tour through the poorer quarters of Tokyo, Count Okuma, a former Prime Minister, and one of the leading statesmen of Japan, has come to the conclusion that it is absolutely impossible for the lower classes, having regard to the current rate of wages and the charges made for breadstuffs, to earn sufficient for their bare needs. He advocates that the duty on rice should be abolished, but the authorities refuse to listen.

Ancient Law Invoked
When two young men appeared in the Toronto police court to answer the charge, laid under the Criminal Code of Queen Elizabeth's reign of failing to support their mother, they agreed to provide four dollars a week between them, and the ancient law had not to be enforced.

SAVED LIFE FOR BIBLE
Archie McKechney, an eight-year-old Brampton boy lost his life through trying to recover an old Bible which had fallen into a creek.
Endeavoring to draw the big book out of the swollen stream by means of a pole, the lad lost his balance and tumbled into the muddy water.

the street):—"So you really tell me you have given up drink?"

Tramp—"Yes, ma'am. Only a week ago I passed twelve public houses and didn't enter one of them."

Lady—"Really! The temptation must have been very great."

Tramp—"Yes, ma'am; but I was locked up in the 'Black Maria.'"
