On both sides of the Atlantic the impres has been gaining during recent years that Irish reform of some kind would have to come ere long, and probably with reforms for Eng-land and Scotland as well. On the Gladstone side the expectation has been that the dis-tinction of carrying out these reforms would fall to the Grand Old Man himself or some of eutenants. But more recently another xpectation has been gaining, to wit-that even the Tory Salisbury would consent to do the business biniself, sooner than resign and give the Liberals the chance of doing it. It being generally conceded that reform must most practical question appears now to be-which of the two parties is to have the honor? Just at present it looks as if Salisbury were ned to keep it on his own side, if possible, also that in order to manage this he is willing to concede a good deal. From this

A subject catalog, or finding list of books a the public reference library," compiled up lo Feb. 1, 1889, has just been issued and is a he greater portion of the work of compilaion. It contains an explanatory preface a key to the arrangement of the book, an index of subjects, a miscellaneous catalog, a list of books on Canada and Newfoundland, a list of recent additions and concludes with an index of names of authors. The arrangement key conus the usual divisions of the arts, sciences, etc., and is particularly well put together. The division embracing Canada and Newfoundland enables one at once to find any book on the tory and development of Canada, There altogether about 55,000 volumes. A glance elist of books on Canada will show the mons amount of work done by the Librarin arranging the various works under proeads and in choosing out different articles in various reports and collating them under the common designation. For example the geological survey reports have been indexed in this way, so that if one wishes to find out all that has been done by the Dominion Government in the way of exploration in any locality he can do so at a glance. The index of names at the close of the book will be found to be of great service, for every page on which an author's name is mentioned at all will be found indexed at the end of the book. In conclusion we cannot but praise the Board of Management, and especially Mr. Bain, the librarian, for the complete and judicious way in which the catalog has been compiled and hope that the other libraries in the city, including that of the Legislative Assembly and that of Teronto University, will soon see their way clear to issue similar catalog at least Will be found an excellent remedy for sick because in the catalog at least way clear to issue similar catalog at least will be found an excellent remedy for sick because in the catalog at least way clear to issue similar catalog at least way clear to issue similar catalog at least the common of the control of the cont parious reports and collating them under way clear to issue similar catalog at least ouce in every four or five years, so that one may be able to put his finger on a book in a few minutes instead of having to trust to huge books filled with slips of paper or to the libra-

the order. He found from this investigation that every member was bound to the most implicit and blind obedience. They must even sacrifice their lives if ordered to do so. Other authors represented the Jesuits as being a two-faced shield—one side representing the glory of God and the salvation of souls and the other side the glory of the society and its future ascendancy.

As the society, has been in the past so it is now. There has been no change or shadow of turning. Quarting further from The Quarterly Review of 1874 it was found that the charge that the Pone who suppressed the order had

Mr. Amyot: "They were not expelled from Russia."

Mr. McCarthy: "They were expelled from Russia, and their expulsion out an end to the concordat that had existed between St. Petersburg and the papal authority at Rome." After reading from endorsed reports of the debates at Paris on the Jesuits at the time their expulsion was discussed, he said it would be for the House to judge whether the Jesuits were an order who were thought fit to be encouraged in this country. The Jesuits were expelled from Germany in 1872. They had been admitted into Prassia by Frederick II. Their expulsion from that country was especially applicable to this country. Having obtained a footbold in that country they had begun to spread ultramontane principles that were considered in imical to civil government.

The same persons who were incorporated did visit the Province of Ontario.

THE IDRONTO WORLD. THURSDAY MORNING MARCH 29, 1825.

THE ADDRESS LORGE STATE AND ADDRESS A made at the close of the war His Britannic Majesty agreed to grant the freedom to evergies the rights of the Romish Church so far as the laws of Great Britain permit. We had been told that this last clause introduced the Supremany Act. Now the very essence of this act is that no person outside of the realm of England shall have or exercise within the Queen's dominions any spiritual authority. Under this there would be for the Province of Quebec no bishop or priest, no sacrament for the dying, and every altar would be cast down. Obviously the treaty meant no such thing but that there should be perfect free dom of religion, subject only to the legislation which might be made from time to time. At that time in England it was treason to exercise the Catholic religion. The obvious meaning of the treaty stipulation was in so far as the laws of Great Britain permit to give turning. Quoting further from The Quarterly Review of 1874 it was found that the charge that the Pope who suppressed the order had been poisoned by Jesuits was exploded. The writer endeavored to show, and he thought he did show, that probabilism, mental reservation and that the end justified the means were still the tenets of the order. What was the history of the order? Were they held responsible for the revocation of the edict of Nantes? Oardinal Duffy had written of Jesuits that they were the same to-day as they were 200 years ago. It was useless to make citations, but he did shink their expulsion from France would have been of use to his friends. Everybody else could not always be in the wrong and the Jesuits always in the right. In 1838 a Roman Catholic college was incorporated in Prince Edward Island and the law officers of the Crown of the Act of Supremacy, if the act could be held to apply to that province. Since then the provinces of British North America have received free institutions and legislative powers and, except in those matters of imperial concern, we are made self-governing. And yet we are told that we are under the restrictive legislation of 300 years ago.
