

Massetts portion of the Hydah nation ; and I earnestly pray to God our Father that such scenes may never again be witnessed by old and young at Massett. The fault rests with some of the old people here, who take no interest in things relating to their welfare, and, when one of the old chiefs dies, they like to have their own custom of burying him carried out. This custom has a pernicious effect upon

A HYDAH-CHIEFTESS, LIVING AT MASSETT.
