POPULAR SCIENCE.

THE SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN TO BE GREATIA ENLARGED.

THIS widely circulated and Popular Journal of the Industrial Arts and Sciences enters its twenty-second tear on the 1st of January next, and the Industrial Arts and Sciences enters its twenty-second tear on the 1st of January next, and the Industrial Publishers propose to signalize the occasion by enlarging it to the size of the most costly Scientific Joannals of Great Initials, without, however, increasing the subscription price.

It is almost superfluous to speak of the great value of this Popular and Useful Journal to an classes, and especially to Mechanics, Manufacturers, Inventors, Englineers, Chemists, Agriculturists, and all who love to read of the wondrous progress which now marks every department of Mechanical Engineering and the Industrial Arts and Sciences generally.

The Editorial department is very ably conducted, and many of the best writers in this country and Europe are contributors to its pages. Many of the articles have the charm of romance about them, and inspire the mind with noble ideas.

The Scientific American has the largest circulation of any similar journal in existence, but it ought to have a million of readers in this growing country.

The engravings of New Inventions, Tools, implements for the Farm, Workshop and Household are very numerous and are splendidy executed by the bost artists in the world. This feature of the paper is very stitking, and has won the praise of the united press of this country and Europe.

Another feature peculiar to the Scientific American is the weekly issue of Fatent Clauns, with copious motices of new inventions, together with Reviews of Foreign Inventions and Discoveries in every department of Science.

Whoever reads the Scientific American is instructed and enteredued, without being bothered with hard words and dry details.

The American and European Patent Offices, in connection with the Scientific American, form an immense duscum of Mechanical Novellies, with traish constant employment to a large corps of Scientific Examiners who prepare drawings and 4118 widely circulated and Popular Journal of the Industrial Arts and Sciences enters its twenty-for l'atents.

This firm is no doubt the most extensive in the

Now is the time to send in sub-criptions to the Scientific American, so us to begin with the new volume.

The numbers for a year make up a splendidly illustrated volume of $32 pages. Terms:—$3 per annum. $1.60 for six manths, $1 for four months; (this of ten and upward, $2.60 each; Canadian subscribers, $2.25 per annum, always in advance. Specimen numbers sent tree; also, a pamphlet of advice to inventors. Address inventors. Address
