

The International Sanitary Conference.

The result of the work of the International Sanitary Conference recently held in Paris, has just been made public, and the object of this conference to enact measures preventing the spread of infections and contagious diseases, especially those of an epidemic form, is well known. The conference this year deals more particularly with Asiatic cholera and the endeavor is to cut off cholera at its starting place in India rather than to let it loose over the country and then to quarantine infected places.

There are two ways of stamping out cholera in the beginning, one is to ensure pure drinking water everywhere and the other is to keep the Mecca pilgrims clean. Beyond these all measures are as nothing. Hagar's well where the Mussulman pilgrims wash and drink is nothing better than sewer water, and the deaths from drinking this water are many hundreds in one day. The pilgrim has a right to die for the glory of Mohammed, but has he the right to carry this plague wherever he goes and thus to the rest of the world?
