

The Canadian Centre for Foreign Policy Development

What we do

The Canadian Centre for Foreign Policy Development has been established to help Canadians participate in foreign policy-making.

ADVISORY BOARD

The Foreign Affairs Minister's Advisory Board identifies emerging and strategic foreign policy issues. Those issues and others of interest to the Minister will be publicized by the Centre in order to invite public input.

NETWORKING

Canadians who have an interest in responding to these issues and in participating in the development of foreign policy are invited to contact us. There are local policy development groups in a number of cities (NGOs, academics and others). Please get in touch for names and addresses of coordinators in your area. You can help to identify issues and options for policy development attention. Inform us of your foreign policy interests. If you develop a policy options project proposal, please submit it to us for funding consideration.

SUPPORT FOR PUBLIC PROJECTS

The Centre will support seminars, policy options papers and other initiatives. These activities can be initiated by the Centre, or they can be proposed by the public. The Centre's activities include the National Forum on Canada's International Relations, support for conferences and other initiatives that contribute to the development of the
