In West Gwillimbury, 49,224 acres are taken up, 14,269 of which are under cultivation. A small portion of the north-east corner of the township is cut off by Cook's Bay, a portion of Lake Simcoe. An extensive marsh, varying in breadth from a quarter of a mile to a mile, and bordered by a tamarae swamp, extends from the bay to the south-west corner of the township. The west branch of the Holland River runs through the centre of this marsh. The east branch enters the township at the Holland Landing, and runs nearly a north course till it joins the east branch about three miles from the lake. Like the west branch, it is bordered by a broad marsh on the greatest part of its course. Above the "Forks" the navigation of the east branch is difficult from the numerous bends and shallowness of the water. The steamboat "Beaver," however, manages to ascend within four miles of Holland Landing. The west branch is said to be navigable for seven or eight miles above Bradford. At the Bradford Bridge it is about ten feet deep. The soil of the township varies in quality: some of it is very good; other parts again are poor. The soil of the north-east of the township is light, but of tolerable quality. Timber—pine, intermixed with oak, poplar, &c. The west of the township is well settled, and contains very good farms. The villages of Bradford, Bond Head, and Mid-Hetown, are situated in the township. Two thousand eight hundred acres of Crown lands are open for sale in the township, at $s. currency per acre.
