have an underlying strength in the well-curved, broad shoulder-cut-in the collar, the lapels, the back.

There's scientific tailorship throughout which preserves the exclusive style and fit - no matter to what wear and tear the suit is subjected.

Each particular part of "Plastic Form" tailoring receives the entire attention of an expert. He knows the disposition of his collar— his back—his cuff. He is able to attain just the curve—the exact "set" he desires.

When one considers these things—sees the perfect result—sees suits to choose, not in whole cloth, but as they will appear when worn, the whole effect—the custom tailor suffers from the contrast.

The most particular dresser will choose from these ready-to-wear garments with satisfaction and he can congratulate himself on saving much time, worry and money.
