Sixteen winters back we heard "What'll you write about now?"
Year by year they've passed the word, 'What'll you write about now! Sport, we know, runs somewhat lame, War has also nicked the game, Yet our answer is the same-We'll write about a column

THE JOB ETERNAL.

There are few jobs in this wrought up commonwealth that last forever, is. There are few assignments that parallel the late Mr. Tennyson's brook. But if you insist upon having such an occupation we suggest that you go west and pick out some football team to coach. Stagg went to Chicago over twenty years ago, or thereabouts, and the Maroon instructor has only begun to get well warmed up. Fielding H. Yost hit Michigan something like seventeen years ago, and he has hardly more than started. Harry Williams lit upon Minnesota twenty years or so ago, and, like Stagg and Yost, he has just begun to coach. These three western leaders have served a total of some sixty or more years on the three Jobs. In that time they have trained and developed over 1,000 players. Just how many million tackles they have seen made and missed, just how many spirals they have watched drift down the field, is a trifle beyond our statistical lore. But it has been enough.

"A man does not necessarily need a school-room education to have what we refer to as 'baseball brains,'" says Ray Schalk, leading backstop of the American League.
"I admit this is the day of the college player in baseball," adds Schalk, "and the better education a man has, all other things being equal, the better player he should be. But he might know a lot of Greek literature, wave motion, phrenology, analytical geometry, metaphysics and similar subjects and still be absolutely a frost on a ball or the hit and run.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—Some sixty major league players are already enrolled in war service. The number is likely to be doubted or trebled by spring. This circumstance may help to solve the roster problem of the big fellows to a degree, but only minor activity can develop fitting substitutes.

Unless the National Commission, acting for the major leagues, can influence the National Association to display slightly more sentiment toward the obscure minor leagues, organized baseball throughout is bound to suffer.

New York, Nov. 20, 'Iess Willard wants to box Georges Carpentier for the heavyweight championship of the world, it was reported today.

In view of the fact that a great deal of the Atlantic Ocean rolls between New York and Somewhere in France, and that Carpentier is in army service, Jess probably is perfectly safe in declaring he wants to meet the burly Frenchman. Georges has been trying for many a day to fix it up so he could come to America to fight for the benefit of the Red Cross, but so far he hasn't had any more luck than Nicholas Romanoff.

Walter Monohan, who has been spending the summer sparring with Jess Willard as a daily side line to the Willard one-ring circus, blew into Chicago, where he dished out an interesting bit of news that made Tom Jones sink down into a big arm-chair in one of the Chicago hotels.

Monohan said the circus netted Willard nearly $200,000 this summer. Walter also announced that Willard has no intentions of spending the winter in Chicago. "He's located on the beach outside of Jacksonville, Fla., Monohan said, "and it looks as though he is planted there until spring."

This was the hardest blow of all for Jones. He has been spending a considerable amount of time at the depot walting for Jess's arrival, in the hopes of getting a sum of money he claims Willard owes him.
